Short-term rental proposal draws criticism from officials

BY TED SHOCKLEY
Eastern Shore Post

A General Assembly bill would allow short-term rental properties managed by a licensed real estate agent to be exempt from some municipal restrictions and ordinances. The bill, filed by state Senator Lynwood Lewis Jr. of Accomac, would limit a locality's ability to place restrictions on short-term rentals — which are usually used by vacationers and travelers in lieu of hotels — that are managed by real estate agents. Lewis said the bill would prevent “regulations that can be overly burdensome” to the rentals. Short-term rentals not affiliated with a real estate agent would be subject to the municipality's rules. “Some localities took it to the (greatest) degree,” said Lewis of the regulations. He advocated putting oversight of the issue in the hands of real estate professionals. “The Realtors are licensed by the Commonwealth of Virginia. They are regulated by the Commonwealth of Virginia,” he said. The bill caused frustration among Eastern Shore government leaders who have been working to regulate short-term rental.

A billboard on U.S. Route 13 near Belle Haven includes information on the disappearance of Jay'von Malik Bailey. Bailey's remains were found by a hunter and positively identified.

Remains are of man missing since April

STAFF REPORT

Human remains found last week near Belle Haven have been positively identified as an Accomack County man missing since April.

The skeletal remains of Jay'von Malik Bailey, 18, of Temperanceville, who was last seen April 14, 2022, were found by a hunter on Monday, Jan. 9, Accomack County Sheriff Todd Wessells said.

The Norfolk Medical Examiner made the identification, Wessells said in a prepared release Wednesday, Jan. 18.

Bailey's disappearance was the subject of an NBC News feature, several regional television reports, and a billboard near Belle Haven that sought information about his disappearance.

Wessells said the hunter discovered the remains and reported them at 12:22 p.m. that day.

When deputies arrived on they scene they found skeletal remains consistent with human features.

The remains were transported to the medical examiner for determination and identification, Wessells said.

According to the NBC News report, Bailey grew up in Temperanceville and is one of four siblings.

"He's a kind-hearted person," his mother, Naomi Campbell, told NBC News. "He's fun to be around."

Police have searched several areas of the Eastern Shore since Bailey's disappearance.

An investigation into this incident is ongoing and anyone with information on this or any other incident is asked to contact the Accomack County Sheriff's Office at 757-787-1131 or 757-824-5666 or tips may be submitted at accomack-countysheriffsoffice.org

Inaugural King Day event draws capacity crowd

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

A capacity crowd celebrated the life and legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in an inaugural event held Monday evening at the Historic Palace Theatre in Cape Charles.

The event, sponsored by Pastor Kelvin F. Jones and his church, First Baptist Church of Capeville, was billed as an evening of music and also included presentation of awards to five community leaders.

Sabrina Parker, a retired educator, was awarded the Dreamkeepers award. Parker also was mistress of ceremonies at the event.

Deacon Charles Bell was awarded the Drum Major for Social Justice award.

Willie Randall was awarded a philanthropy award and Matthew and Malik McCaskill were honored as upcoming philanthropists.

Performers included the Hampton Roads Boys Chorus, Northampton High School Chorus, Northampton High School Band, Jackie Faison-Elmandorf, students of Occohannock and Kiptopeke elementary schools, and retired U.S. Army Master Sgt. Alvy Powell.

Pastor Janet Wheelock read scripture and Father Michael Imperial gave prayers.

John Coker, chairman of the Northampton County Board of Supervisors, and Cape Charles Mayor Adam Charney greeted the crowd.

"All of my life I have grown up hearing about the dream and the dreamer," Jones said in a statement of purpose for the gathering.

Jones recalled how Northampton residents celebrated when then-President Ronald Reagan signed the law making Martin Luther King Jr. Day a national holiday and how residents marched to the courthouse green in Eastville to honor King's legacy.

Still, Jones said King's dream has not yet been fulfilled.

"The dream is a challenge tonight to all America," he said.

"I believe that after 60 years of the dream being deferred and the dream being delayed, I believe that your presence in the Palace Theatre tonight is an indication that the dream cannot be denied," Jones said.

Jones said he believes Northampton County "has decided to follow the path of diversity, equity, and inclusion for all the people."

"I have hope tonight, after 60 years, Northampton County sees the day (MLK Jr. Day) as a day for all people, for all families, for every individual ... to reach inside and see each other as friends, not foes," Jones said.

Accomack NAACP holds King Day celebration

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

The Accomack chapter of the NAACP held its annual Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. celebration Monday at Living Word Church of Deliverance near Parksley.

Camesha Handy, chapter vice president, opened the event, noting the Accomack NAACP is undertaking several initiatives to become more active in the community.

The memorial celebration for Dr. King included music, reading of scripture, prayer, a praise dance, recitation of King's "I Have a Dream" speech by 11-year-old Monica Watkins, and a message given by Bishop David Sabatino of Foundation of Faith Worship Center.

Sabatino is an educator who currently serves as president of the chapter and who also recently became assistant principal at Arcadia High School.

Bishop spoke about the Bible verse, Matthew 16:19, in which Jesus tells the Apostle Peter he will be given "the keys to kingdom."

Sabatino spoke about "the power of the keys," noting keys give the holder access — the ability to enter and exit a place.

"Keys represent authority," he said, urging congregation members to use the power they have been given, including by taking advantage of opportunities to become educated, to vote, to attend and participate in school board and board of supervisors meetings, to diversify the workforce by applying for jobs in law enforcement and education, and to run for elected office.

"Dr. Martin Luther King marched, went to jail, was beaten, and was assassinated to give us the keys," Sabatino said of the Black community's gains in civil rights.

"Praise God you've got the keys now," he said, adding, "...You need to use your keys."

In a statement of purpose during the event, Shenay Wharton said, "The fight for justice must be ongoing. Silence is acceptance and we need to take this day to reflect on the work that Dr. King started and take responsibility for the work we all still have left to do."

Shore closer to new public safety radio

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

The Accomack County Board of Supervisors approved committing around $786,000 to an initiative to improve infrastructure for the region's public safety radio system.

The money comes from federal funds the county received as result of the American Rescue Plan Act.

The amount is the county's share of the local cost.

The Eastern Shore of Virginia 9-1-1 Commission is ready to enter into a contract soon for the project, Director Jeff Flournoy told the board of supervisors at the Dec.14 board meeting.

It is expected to take around two years to implement the new system, which will serve law enforcement, fire and EMS, and 911 dispatch agencies in Accomack and Northampton counties, with interoperability with numerous other agencies.

The total cost is more than $9.3 million, of which $8.32 million is covered by federal grants.

The local share is to be split between Accomack and Northampton, according to an established formula by which Accomack County pays 66.6% of the total.

Former U.S. Rep. Elaine Luria in March announced $11.2 million in federal grants for Eastern Shore projects, including $8.2 for the public safety radio communications system.

The award was the single largest community project amount awarded in the entire country in 2022.

Once completed, the new regional system will provide public safety-grade, reliable, mission-critical voice and data communications for first responders.

After the board's action, around $204,595 remains in the county's ARPA coffers.

Of the $3.1 million second allotment of ARPA funds the county received, around $1.9 million is committed as a local share for broadband improvements and $250,000 is for the Eastern Shore Coalition Against Domestic Violence facility, in addition to the money committed to the radio system.

Horntown, Smith projects funded

The Virginia Department of Housing and Community Development issued conditional approval for a $50,000 planning grant for a housing rehabilitation project in East Horntown.

Accomack County Administrator Mike Mason told the board of supervisors at the Dec. 14 meeting before the county can receive the money, several activities must be completed by March 1, including a status report on all projects the county currently has open; completion of an initial public meeting about the project; and completion of two management team meetings with a sub-committee of key stakeholders from the Accomack-Northampton Planning District Commission and local government, along with citizen participants.

Additionally, a planning grant for Mary Nottingham Smith Cultural Center in Accomack was conditionally approved by DHCD, Mason said.

Dual-enrollment EMT program finalized

High school students in Accomack County starting in January will be able to enroll in an Emergency Medical Technician Basic Life Support training and certification program in school, Accomack County Administrator Mike Mason told the board of supervisors at its Dec.14 meeting.

School Superintendent Chris Holland and Mason signed an agreement for the program earlier in December.

Accomack County and the Accomack County School Board established the curriculum together.

The program will be offered to juniors and seniors in Accomack County Public Schools.

The county agreed to provide a classroom and a qualified instructor for the program.

The class will be a dual enrollment class with Eastern Shore Community College, so students completing the class and obtaining certification also will receive college credits.

The school district will provide instructional materials and will transport students to and from any off-site classroom provided by the county, according to the agreement.

Accomack officer is charged with DUI

An Accomack County Sheriff's Office investigator has been charged with driving under the influence of alcohol after crashing his unmarked police car.

Michael R. McCready, 41, of Parksley, also was charged with reckless driving, according to a press release from the sheriff's office.

He was released on a $1,000 unsecured bond. An administrative investigation was immediately initiated and McCready was subsequently terminated from his employment, said Sheriff Todd Wessells in a prepared release.

McCready was not on duty at the time of the incident.

On Monday, Jan. 16, at 4 p.m., Wessells was informed that McCready was involved in a vehicle accident on Nelsonia Road, just outside Bloxom town limits.

"Upon deputies' arrival on the scene, it was determined that Investigator McCready appeared to be under the influence of alcohol," according to the release.

The State Police were called to investigate the incident and subsequently charged McCready.

SERVING VIRGINIA'S EASTERN SHORE

THE PAPER'S POSITION

The high costs involved in growing our food

Inflation has burdened everyone. But it is especially jolting to hear how inflation has impinged on farming. The cost of growing our food has never been so high. The result is hitting U.S. consumers in the grocery store checkout lines.

"This is the most perilous time for American agriculture," Accomack County farmer David Hickman told the Energy and Commerce Committee of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Hickman's comments were included in an article in last week's edition. An agriculturally rich area like ours is fortunate for one of its own to be heard by legislators from all over the country.

He said the cost of diesel fuel on his farm increased 186% last year. Costs of propane and gasoline also skyrocketed.

Natural gas, which provides nitrogen for fertilizer, increased because much of it came from Russia and Belarus prior to the start of Russia's war with Ukraine. Hickman said his fertilizer costs were up a whopping 225%.

"Agriculture is directly affected by energy and petroleum," he said.

As everyone knows, the spinoff impact of higher agricultural costs are found in your grocery store. Nobody is spared such an impact.

The chair of the committee, U.S. Rep. Cathy McMorris Rodgers (R-WA), said Congress has an opportunity to address these spiraling costs.

One way will be to allow for more domestic natural gas production, which would help the price on fertilizer.

The agricultural community and rural areas like ours will be watching.

It's time for a focused effort on Eastern Shore litter control

BY VIRGINIA SCHNEIDER

Guest columnist

Most of us realize the Eastern Shore of Virginia is a very special place to live and work.

Surrounded by water and nature and consisting of sprawling farms, it is a peaceful respite far from the chaos of metropolitan life.

The Eastern Shore is a gem located between the beautiful Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic Ocean. The possibilities for this scenic peninsula are endless.

So I wonder why the Shore, such an idyllic place, is strewn with roadside trash and unsightly litter.

I had the privilege of reading multiple essays written by children aged 6 to 18 on the topic of litter. The overwhelming theme was their concern for the environment and the safety of wildlife.

and safety hazards litter creates, not just the unsightly appearance on the roadside.

Litter can cause physical harm or injury to people, facilitate the spread of disease such as dangerous and life-threatening mosquito borne diseases, pollute the environment, affect and kill wildlife, increase the probability of fires, and provide a breeding ground for insects and rodents.

There are multiple causes for the litter problem on the Eastern Shore including debris and trash blowing out of truck beds, disposal of unwanted items from the windows of vehicles, and failure to use the convenience centers thus depositing household trash on roadways.

It is time to get serious about the litter problem that plagues the Eastern Shore.

To be successful, the culture needs to change, and to do this there needs to be an aggressive campaign to increase awareness, educate the public, and enforce laws prohibiting the disposal of litter on roadways and in waterways.

There are multiple agencies attacking the current litter problem, including Virginia Department of Transportation, Department of Public Works, and Waste Watchers of the Eastern Shore. In addition, there are conscientious citizens who have adopted highways

Remembering Randy Parks, a math teacher for the ages

Those who knew Randy Parks, the inimitable former Northampton High School teacher, would not be surprised at the after-death instructions on which he insisted.

Ted Shockley

Parks, lovably gruff and a bit idiosyncratic, demanded that he have no funeral and no obituary. He advised his daughter to use the cheapest cremation service available — preferably something less than $1,000.

“It was typical dad,” said his daughter, Lydia Pugh, of Virginia Beach.

After six months — “By six months, you can get over my death,” he told his daughter

— he gave permission to throw a party in his memory, when the grieving is finished.

“He didn’t want anybody to be sad,” said Pugh, who told her father she might not simply “get over” his death in a mere six months.

He wasn’t having it. “You need to get it together,” he said.

It was classic Randy Parks — pragmatic and straightforward, but in a big-hearted way, with a sly grin.

Parks, who was 78 when he died this past Dec. 30, taught advanced mathematics — calculus and the like — at Northampton High for more than four decades.

Afterward, he was among those who advocated for an elected school board and won election to it.

He had quite a presence with his full beard, John Lennon-style eyeglasses, and a voice that was all gravel and cigarettes.

Randy Parks as a teacher, at left, and as a grandfather. Parks died this past Dec. 30.

He had high expectations for students but also a soft spot for them.

“He literally taught everyone,” Pugh said.

Parks is the latest of the bedrock Eastern Shore educators to pass away. Their deaths are startling to their former students, who have nostalgic, frozen-in-time memories of caring educators who never gave up on kids.

Hardly a week goes by without hearing about the death of a true local educational treasure — people who sacrificed their earning potential elsewhere to make a difference in Eastern Shore schools.

Some of them, like Parks, were so synonymous with local education that it is impossible to imagine life without them, even years after their

Those lifelong educators, school nurses, and other staff members have a prominent, influential spot in our communities — and our hearts.

Parks was one of those expert teachers who enjoyed helping. After he retired, he was asked to come back to Northampton High to teach a group of ninth-grade students who couldn’t pass their class or their state-mandated standardized tests.

Pugh said he used peer instruction as well as lecture. They all passed their state tests.

“This was one of his proudest moments,” she said.

Himself a Northampton High graduate, Parks earned a degree from Virginia Tech and then joined the Peace Corps, where his duties included teaching in a prison in Colombia.

After retirement, he continued his love of traveling. Pugh said he stopped giving Christmas presents to his children — except for a pair of socks given each year — and instead took them traveling.

Pugh and her brothers, Zachary Parks of Virginia Beach, Jacob Parks of Cheriton, and Carter Parks of Eastville, ended up in Spain, Portugal, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, and more.

In retirement Parks also built his dream home at Smith Beach with some help. He enjoyed hosting his children and grandchildren there.

Parks had prostate cancer that had been treated but worsened. He wanted to sell his body to science but his condition at death prevented it.

“He was just so grateful for this life he had lived,” said.

Our community is grateful he lived it here.

Cape Charles council member disagrees with Lewis’ bill on short-term rentals

To the editor:

I can appreciate the importance of short-term rentals, their benefits to tourism-related economies such as the Eastern Shore’s, and their transient occupancy taxes as a revenue stream for local governments.

What I do not understand is why state Sen. Lynwood Lewis would sponsor a bill that severely restricts the ability of any Virginia local government to control, through ordinance, short-term rentals in their localities that are specifically managed by real estate agents.

What a gift to real estate agents. It would be interesting to see who actually drafted this bill that the senator is sponsoring.

At the time of this letter writing, this bill has been referred to the Committee on Local Government that Lewis chairs.

Cape Charles has well over 200 short-term rentals in our town and has recognized both good and bad with this growing situation.

Our recently updated Cape Charles Comprehensive Plan identifies, as will our Town Council list of strategic priorities, the need to create a short-term rentals ordinance.

This bill, if adopted, would eliminate most of the requirements we would expect contained in such an ordinance for those managed by real estate agents.

Having two sets of rules would be a nightmare. Local governments need the ability to impose requirements and limitations to suit their local needs on this subject.

This bill should be withdrawn, and I encourage readers to write to Lewis at district06@senate.virginia.gov to express their disapproval. I just did.

Take a deep breath and get ready for big numbers

Mathematicians tell us some preposterous things that, trusting science and not being that good with numbers, we take on faith.

David Lozell Martin

Mathematicians tell us, for example, that if you thoroughly shuffle a deck of cards, the resulting arrangement of those 52 cards has never occurred before in the history of the world and will never occur again.

The chances of two decks being shuffled and then ending up with the same 52-card arrangement is one in 8 followed by 67 zeros.

Looking at it another way, if every person on Earth were to shuffle a deck of cards once a second and continue to do this for a span of time equal to the age of the universe, the chances that any two of those gazillions (not an official math term) of shuffled decks will have the same 52-card arrangement is one chance in a trillion, trillion, trillion.

With all that in mind, try this: Take a deep breath and hold it. Mathematicians tell us there's a good chance that at least one molecule of air currently in your lungs was also breathed in and exhaled by Jesus Christ. It's not a similar molecule of air but the exact same molecule breathed by Jesus.

He breathed out that molecule and it mixed in with all the other molecules that make up our atmosphere. The world's air (including that molecule) spread across the globe and mixed so thoroughly with the air we breathe that our every breath carries a Jesus molecule.

The math behind this contains humungous (also not an official math term) numbers similar to those involved in the randomness of shuffled cards.

Sam Kean, who wrote "Caesar's Last Breath" about air, explained the distribution of air molecules like this: If 300 prison inmates were released for even distribution across the U.S. land mass of 3.8 million square miles, each inmate would be distributed to 125,000 square miles. The chances of one of those 300 inmates ending up in Exmore is virtually zero.

But if 10,000 inmates were released, the chances of Exmore getting one would be about 20%. But if all 2.2 million people in U.S. prisons were released and distributed equally across the U.S. land mass, chances are Exmore would get 43 inmates.

Similarly, the number of air molecules in the atmosphere is huge (like the land mass of the U.S.) but the number of molecules we exhale with each breath is also significant (like the total U.S. prison population).

It takes about two years for our exhaled breath to mix with the atmosphere and spread over the globe. Considering that the bond keeping atoms of air together is strong, these atoms last virtually forever. The molecules in our breath have been breathed in and out by every air-breathing creature who ever existed.

A mathematician is someone who is good with numbers but lacks the sparkling personality of an accountant. Still, you have to give the math geeks credit for coming up with such a fun interpretation of numbers as to show the breath currently in our lungs contains molecules that once were in the lungs of Jesus Christ and Davy Crockett and Harriet Tubman and a dinosaur looking up at that strange fire in the sky.

Exhale.

Tips for care during Mental Wellness Month

BY CAMRYN BUYEA
Guest columnist

January is filled with people readying themselves to fulfill their resolutions, goals, and expectations for the New Year.

Whether it be spending less time on social media, joining a gym, or trying new things, people are feeling this sense of newness — "new year, new me."

It's not always that easy, especially when it comes to your mental wellness.

During this time, between long nights and seasonal depression, people struggle with their mental well-being.

January is Mental Wellness Month and this article contains some tips for you to help take care of yourself.

One thing that is important to remember is that you aren't alone.

"According to the National Alliance on Mental Illness, 43.8 million, or 1 in 5 adults in the U.S., suffer from mental health issues annually."

This isn't a battle you have to face alone. Spending more time with your loved ones can help improve your mood and relationships.

Also planning a trip, showing gratitude, and taking better care of yourself can help combat mental illnesses and general life dissatisfaction.

If you decide that maybe you need some more guidance or help, therapy is another way of taking care of your mental well-being.

A "new you" is absolutely possible in the New Year, but so is becoming a better, healthier you.

The Eastern Shore Community Services Board offers outpatient mental health services, telephone counseling, and preventative services, including free trainings on mental health that may be beneficial for helping individuals experiencing mental illnesses.

Writer appreciates ‘these fine folks guarding the keys to the gate’

BY KEN DUFTY
Guest columnist

On the morning of Friday, Jan. 13, Bev Leatherbury, Northampton’s municipal county attorney, stood before Judge W. Revell Lewis Jr. in circuit court and valiantly defended everything that makes the county one of the most cherished and protected rural areas in the commonwealth.

It is that rural quality of life and our scenic backdrop of immense and productive farm fields that are the cornerstones of our economy on all levels, attracting investment and tourists from far and beyond.

The county attorney was defending a March 2022 decision by our Board of Supervisors to deny a special-use permit to Axios LLC and Angelo Manuel to build 13 permanent structures in Capeville on 48 acres of farmland Manuel purchased the previous November. A continuance was granted and the issue will be back in court on a later date.

Our comprehensive plan and zoning ordinance are encoded firewalls against the over-development that, once allowed, can never be undone. Both documents specifically limit the number of permanent structures on farmland to one dwelling per 20 acres.

Axios called 12 of those permanent structures “tourist cottages” which would require 240 acres by standard calculations.

Axios later reduced that number of permanent structures to 7, still appearing to represent a violation of our zoning ordinance.

When Axios tried to submit the application to our planning department in the fall of 2021, the company was told by zoning administrators that its proposal violated density limits and could not be processed.

Later, after a lengthy review, the proposal received an eventual thumbs down by the planning commission and the board of supervisors on March 8, 2022.

The subsequent lawsuit contends that tourist cottages are not permanent structures so density rules don’t apply.

However, the definition of a “dwelling unit” is one that has permanent living conditions like electricity, septic infrastructure, well, bathroom, kitchen, and bedrooms, as well as a certificate of occupancy.

They seemed to argue that because people renting those permanent structures pay transient occupancy tax, it renders those cottages temporary — like a tent, a travel trailer, or a camper, which they are not. Indeed, it is the prospective renters who are “temporary,” not the building they rent.

A year ago, our acting zoning administrator wrote to the board of supervisors that allowing this clear violation of density standards could threaten every piece of farmland in Northampton County, hinting that this perceived assault on our agricultural industry could be the death knell for all that we know and love about this incredible county.

In short, if Axios wins the day, every piece of farmland zoned Ag/Rural Business could quickly, and by precedent, become a motel district.

I give a hearty thank you and a hat-in-hand bow to County Attorney Leatherbury for stepping up to the plate to defend this county, and accolades to her Assistant Attorney’s Jack Thornton and Vincent DeLalla.

We are incredibly fortunate to have these fine folks guarding the keys to the gate.

Taking What I Learned at ESCC and Starting My Own Business

Celeste Briones

“Contacts that I made combined with what I learned at Eastern Shore Community College, continue to help shape my accomplishments years later!” Celeste Briones looks back on her start at ESCC in 2016 as she started taking business classes at the college.

Celeste accomplished quite a bit at ESCC in addition to her Associates Degree in Business in 2020. “I was able to work as an event coordinator and customer service representative at Workforce Development during that time. Both roles taught me so much for future opportunities.”

“To broaden my skills and resume, I also received my CDL license at ESCC. I always have that certification to fall back on if I need it,” Celeste explains that after working in the hospitality industry on Chincoteague Island, she is venturing out as an independent business operator.

“I can’t stress enough how much help ESCC continues to be as I set up my new venture. I still communicate and receive help from my former professors Chevelle Mason and Paul Weitzel. Scott Hall at Workforce is also a huge help.” Celeste started her own business in October called “All Finished Cleaning Services”.

“Putting students like Celeste in the position to pick up real-world experiences through internships or on the job training opportunities is huge.” Scott Hall of ESCC Workforce continues, “Since Celeste moved on to the next stages of her career, we’ve expanded that platform even further with programs like Contact to Career, as well as apprenticeship and mentoring programs.”

Celeste exclaims that “Putting yourself in the position to receive such solid and practical career guidance is easy at ESCC. It allows you to keep your eye on the big picture and stay focused on your goals. Just give yourself credit that you are able to do it. The tools are there at ESCC.”

Anytime is a good time to visit ESCC and find out how to get started on your own success. The possibilities continue to grow and the college’s “YES!” philosophy reflects a willingness to make sure you achieve your goals. Call 757-789-7979 or email workforce@es.vccs.edu!

“No one in my family had gone to college, I had no clear direction. Most of my efforts were based on my feeling I just needed to do something.” Unikeque continued, “Ms. Taylor guided me and shared so much encouragement and support. She has always been there to listen.”

The 2011 Northampton High School graduate secured her LTCA (Long Term Care Assistant) certification in 2013, and with Ms. Taylor’s help, she landed multiple jobs in the local healthcare community. Unikeque added, “She always kept me focused, I was on track to keep growing in my profession.”

That support extended into helping her transfer her licensing from Virginia to Maryland, where Unikeque wanted to work. “Everything Ms. Taylor had helped me with came to fruition here when I completed my bachelor’s degree in Psychology at Coppin State University in Baltimore in 2018”.

Taylor added “I was impressed with Unikeque’s tenacious spirit. Some days she showed up crying, exhausted, and at her wit’s end, but she kept showing up. As a young single mother, many counted her out.” “Young single moms need to know that there is help and support. ESCC makes so much sense for anyone looking to get the start they need. There are people like Ms. Taylor ready to help at every turn.” Unikeque concluded.

In May of this year, Unikeque will be graduating with her Masters degree in Social Work from Howard University. “This couldn’t have happened without my start at ESCC. From intake to completion, job readiness, license transfer, to help with childcare expenses. Everything Eastern Shore Community College and Ms. Taylor afforded me has resulted in my goals being realized.”

Scott Hall at ESCC Workforce sees stories like Unikeque come to fruition every year. He comments, “We just thank students like Unikeque who face their anxieties and fears head-on, accept the help that ESCC provides, and then are willing to share their stories. They have no idea the number of people they influence, especially those who may be feeling trapped by life.”

RICHMOND '23

Of farm-use tags and motorcycle helmets

We sprinted into the second week of the 2023 session with the final number of legislative proposals to the House of Delegates topping 1,000.

These bills will be given to the Speaker of the House, who will determine where the bill goes. This process is called referring.

Delegate
Rob Bloxom

Once the bills are referred to a committee, typically separated by topic, the chairman of that committee will determine which subcommittee is the expert on that topic.

My committee assignments remain the same as last year.

I serve on 15 committees. The four full committees I serve on are Appropriations, Transportation, Privileges and Elections, and Agriculture, Chesapeake and Natural Resources.

Under the full committees I serve, there are 11 subcommittees.

I am also chairman of two of these subcommittees – the Chesapeake and the Capital Outlay subcommittees.

My workload is supposedly the heaviest of any legislator in Richmond. I have no idea if this is true but I enjoy the busy days. This year, unlike previous years, I find myself hitting the 15-bill limit. Four bills originated from the governor and his staff. Others came from industries around the state.

What always fascinates me is that the statement, “This is a simple bill,” almost always turns out to be a very difficult bill and has more changes than one would envision at first glance.

The first bill I have that falls into this category is a motorcycle riders course bill (HB2304). Supposedly, it just updates the code section to eliminate the sidecar training course and to modify the bill to include a course for three-wheeled motorcycles.

However, as it was written, all safety courses can be taken without any safety requirements such as no helmet, no shoes, etc. This will either be fixed, or I will kill the bill myself.

Another bill I am carrying this year is HB1806 concerning farm tag license plates for farm-use vehicles. This bill is a fix for the farm tag bill that passed last year with no real opposition. However, with the Department of Motor Vehicles’ implementation of this bill, numerous problems arose.

The rendition of this bill hopes to fix the problems. Here again, if a fix is not found, I will propose a bill to revert to the historic way of homemade farm tags.

I will continue to keep you updated as bills move through the legislative process in Richmond. I am happy to meet with those of you who are coming from the Eastern Shore and Hampton Roads and to listen to your specific concerns and interests. I encourage you to take a look at the bills that are being considered during the next few weeks. You may follow these bills at <https://lis.virginia.gov> and during the livestream committee and floor sessions.

As always, please feel free to contact me or my staff with any questions or concerns you may have by calling my district office at 757-824-3456 or during session at the Richmond office 804-698-1000 or by emailing me at delrbloxom@house.virginia.gov.

Camp Occohannock’s Duck Dip fundraiser is Jan. 21

BY ADOLPHUS AMES
Eastern Shore Post

Camp Occohannock on the Bay Camp and Retreat Center will host its 15th annual Polar Duck Dip Saturday, Jan. 21. The event will take place from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the camp near Craddockville.

The Polar Duck Dip serves as a fundraiser for the camp and its programs. “Last year we raised more funds than we ever have in the history of the camp,” said Joel Coleman, camp director. “This year we hope to exceed that amount.”

Participants will take a quick dip in Occohannock Creek and then have lunch, which will include soups and desserts. There will also be a silent auction and an open mic where people will be allowed to sing or read poems. The dipper that raises the most donations will receive ice cream for a year from the Island Creamery.

Camp Occohannock, which is affiliated with the United Methodist Church, started in 1958 as a summer camp ministry. It has evolved to include year-round retreats for guest groups, families, and kids. Individuals without church or religious affiliations are also welcome to attend the camp.

The camp offers an array of activities. It has an archery range, a disc-golf course, kickball field, and a basketball court. It also offers kayaking, canoeing, and a biking program and recently added a brand-new playground and climbing equipment. The playground renovations came to fruition thanks to grants from the Eastern Shore of Virginia Community Foundation and GameTime, an organization that manufactures playground equipment.

Coleman, who is from Pennsylvania and has been an ordained pastor for several years, came to the Shore to help strengthen the camp and make a difference in others’ lives.

“We want Camp Occohannock to be a space where people can come together and enjoy themselves,” Coleman said. “Our staff loves being involved in the community.”

Swim coach has spent a life at the pool

The Nandua Warriors girls varsity swim team had its most successful season last year. The team won the Region 2A Championship and finished in fourth place at the 2022 Class 2A State Championship.

Adolphus
Ames

Prior to last season, the team had not finished higher than 17th in state competition. Kathryn J. Bentley, the head coach of the girls swim team, uses the accomplishments as motivation to achieve bigger goals this season.

"I would love to see the girls repeat as regional champs and improve on their fourth-place position in state competition," said Bentley.

This is Bentley's second season as head coach of the Warriors. She also coaches the swim team at the Onley Recreation Association with John Kellam. She has coached the team, consisting of children from ages 4 to 18, for five summers.

Bentley, who grew up in Connecticut and went to high school in South Carolina, has been involved with swimming since childhood.

Her mother was a collegiate swimmer and taught babies from ages 3 months to 1 year old how to float and swim. Bentley started swimming competitively at age 10. In high school, she was a member of a club swim team coached by her mother.

After high school, Bentley attended University of North Carolina Wilmington where she competed on the girls swim team. She swam the 50-meter and 100-meter freestyle.

During her freshman year, the team won the Eastern College Athletic Conference championship. In her sophomore and junior years, UNCW's girls swim team won the Colonial Athletic Association championship.

Bentley's favorite aspect about swimming is that it is both an individual and a team sport.

"In other sports, athletes can talk and discuss things during the game," she said. "Swimmers can't communicate in action because your head is underwater in a pool. You have to be committed and have an internal drive to keep going."

Bentley did not expect to follow in her mother's footsteps and become a coach. She started coaching because her kids were swimming, and Nandua needed a coach.

She draws on her past experience as a competitor to succeed as a coach.

"It doesn't matter if you have great swimming ability or no swimming ability when you try out for the team," said Bentley. "If you show up to practice every day and put in effort, you will become a swimmer. Everyone on the team is supportive of each other."

The outlook is promising as Bentley leads the Warriors toward their goal of repeating as regional champs.

The team lost several seniors but added nine new swimmers to the roster. Four returning swimmers placed and scored at the state championship last year: Grace Bentley, Emma Cathey, Meya Charnock, and Morgan Johnson.

These four competed in individual and relay events, contributing 160 points to the team's total score of 192.

The Warriors have a 3-2 season record. Their most recent victory came against Seaford High School, Jan. 6. The Warriors won, 48-18. Their next swim meet will be at home Friday, Jan. 20. They will compete against Bruton High School.

"It's amazing to go to meets and watch both teams cheer for the last swimmer in the pool," said Bentley. "The level of sportsmanship is so high in swimming. I think it's because everyone knows how hard you have to work to be successful. The swimming community has always been a positive place for me."

Coast Guard Auxiliary helps boaters

BY RUSSELL VREELAND
Special to the Post

This month we are going to focus on how the Coast Guard Auxiliary works to contribute to boating safety for all boaters.

Almost everyone associates the auxiliary with our boating safety classes and that is our primary mission.

In 1939 there were 300,000 private boats registered in the United States. That year the Coast Guard received 14,000 calls for help, 8,600 of which were life-threatening.

That was when the Coast Guard requested formation of the auxiliary to promote boating safety.

Following World War II, the number of registered boats jumped from 500,000 to over 5.5 million. In 1952 the auxiliary started observing the first week in May as Safe Boating Week.

Seven years later the Coast Guard convinced Congress and President Dwight Eisenhower to declare that week National Safe Boating Week. That has been happening ever since.

In 2021 over 75 million Americans went boating. If it were still like 1939, there would be over 3,750,000 calls for help and 2,250,000 life-threatening boating accidents. Instead, in 2021 there were 5,000 accidents and 638 people lost their lives.

That is still too many but it could be worse.

There are several factors that help to make boating safer so the auxiliary can't take credit for all of it. But 77% of all fatalities happen to boaters without proper boating safety education and the auxiliary is the premier boating education organization.

Flotilla 12-02 needs your help to continue this mission. We hope you will consider joining us. Call 757-442-7029 or come visit our next meeting at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 24, at the Exmore firehall.

Olivia Mason led the Ponies' offense with 12 points. Caitlyn McPherson had three points. Alyson Clark, Naomi Sterling, and Carmela Rosanova each earned two points. Jayla Handy had one point.

The Ponies opened the third quarter with a 3-pointer of their own, which swung momentum back into their favor for the remainder of the night. The Ponies won 71-66.

The new library under construction in Parksley should be completed by early April, according to Accomack County Public Works Director Stewart Hall.

"Good progress is being made," Hall told the Accomack Board of Supervisors Wednesday.

The completion date has been pushed back numerous times due to pandemic-related and other problems, after ground was broken in October 2019.

The $5.3 million, 20,837-square-foot facility will be the regional headquarters for the Eastern Shore Public Library system as well as home to the new Eastern Shore of Virginia Heritage Center.

The county terminated its agreement with the original contractor after the contractor failed to complete the project by the agreed upon date.

The surety company that held the bond took over the task of getting the building finished and has been addressing the county's concerns, Hall said.

A fire suppression system in the building has been online for two weeks with no false alarms but areas of the roof still need additional re-working, although there have been no leaks for some time, according to Hall.

County staff plan to meet monthly with library foundation members to keep everyone abreast of progress toward completion, Hall said.

als, which can put active vacationers — and the festive atmosphere that often accompanies them — in quiet residential areas.

Others said it was taking a responsibility away from elected officials and putting it in the hands of real estate agents.

"It's an erosion of local control," said John Hozey, the town manager of Cape Charles, which has about 200 short-term rentals within its limits.

He said the bill would create one set of rules for short-term rentals managed by real estate agents and different rules for self-managed properties.

"Administrating something like that would be a nightmare," Hozey said.

Even though he manages one of the Eastern Shore's most-visited vacation towns, Hozey said he wasn't asked about the bill before it was filed.

"This all was submitted at the very last moment," he said. "The public really didn't get to know it was coming."

The bill would prohibit a locality from limiting occupancy, requiring additional parking spaces, or disallowing short-term rentals altogether.

It also would prohibit building code inspections more frequently than every five years unless a complaint had been made.

Lewis said one of the benefits of the bill is that it would give renters a single point of contact — the real estate agent managing the property — in case there was a problem.

He said the bill will not override a municipality's licensing of short-term rentals, nor would it trump a homeowner's association.

"It's a process," Lewis said of the bill. "It will continue to evolve."

John Coker, chairman of the Northampton County Board of Supervisors, said the bill "is based on what real estate agents want, and not on what is being experienced in our towns and counties by our citizens."

He said: "We very much like our visitors and want our property owners to be able to rent their houses but we do not want this activity to disrupt our local neighborhoods and our citizens."
