On Capitol Hill, area farmer addresses energy costs

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

Accomack County farmer David Hickman spoke to members of the U.S. House Energy and Commerce Committee in Washington, D.C., Tuesday during an in-person roundtable discussion to talk about the impacts of rising energy costs.

Hickman is a fifth-generation operator of Dublin Farms in Horntown. The farm produces potatoes, green beans, corn, and soybeans.

Hickman serves on several boards of the Virginia Farm Bureau.

Hickman was one of four panelists invited to address the committee, chaired by Rep. Cathy McMorris Rodgers (R-WA).

"We are addressing one of the priority issues facing our nation right now, and that's the rising energy costs," Rodgers said, adding, "We have an opportunity this Congress to address what American families and busi-

How to talk to a loved one about senior living

It can be worrisome when you have an elderly loved one living alone. You may wonder if they are safe. Are they happy? Do they feel isolated? We encourage families to talk and make a plan early and find a senior living community that you will all feel comfortable with, rather than being forced to make a decision in an emergency.

Here are some tips for broaching the subject with your loved one:

- Remind Mom or Dad that you love them and are worried about their wellbeing.
- Ask what would need to happen for them to decide it was time to move.
- Discuss their thoughts about senior living and what they would like to see in a community.

Commonwealth Senior Living has been guiding families on this journey for more than 20 years and we would be honored to help yours too.

Rocket Lab sets new launch date

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

Rocket Lab this week announced a new launch date for the company's inaugural Electron mission to launch from Wallops Island.

The rocket is set to lift off on Monday, Jan. 23, between 6 and 8 p.m., according to spokesperson Morgan Bailey.

There are backup launch opportunities through early February.

The company is still waiting for its first launch from the United States after bad weather, delays finalizing government approval, and holiday air-space restrictions scrapped plans to launch in December.

Rocket Lab's original launch facility is in New Zealand, from where the company has successfully launched 32 Electron rockets to date.

The company has plans to launch multiple Electron rockets from Wallops each year. The first will carry satellites into orbit for a geospatial analytics company.

Additionally, a manufacturing and processing facility for Rocket Lab's larger Neutron rocket, in development, is under construction just outside the Wallops Island gate.

Neutron is designed for mega-constellation deployment, deep space missions, and human spaceflight, according to the company.

CEO Peter Beck said the company's activities at Wallops will create "in the order of hundreds" of jobs.

Federal funding OK'd for study of dredging to build up Tangier

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

The spending bill passed by Congress and signed by President Joe Biden in December includes $300,000 for a study on Tangier that could pave the way for the use of dredging spoils to build up the eroding island.

U.S. Senators Tim Kaine and Mark Warner in a joint statement called the study “a necessary down payment before any construction work can begin on Tangier to use navigational dredged material to address the loss of habitat and eroding shoreline, the impacts of sea level rise, recurrent coastal flooding, and coastal storms.”

The budget also includes $25 million for dredging Baltimore Harbor — pending the study’s results, that project could provide the material for a future beneficial-use project on Tangier.

The government funding bill for fiscal year 2023 includes $200 million in dedicated funds secured by Kaine and Warner for Virginia projects.

“Virginia will benefit greatly from the budget President Biden just signed, and I’m grateful to every Virginian whose insights and advice helped me shape this legislation to best meet the Commonwealth’s needs,” said Kaine.

He added, “Not only will this budget execute the pay raise Congress just authorized for our servicemembers, expand internet access, address mental and physical health needs, and expand access to affordable housing — it will bring over $200 million in funding back to Virginia to support urgent local community projects. This budget is a big win and I look forward to seeing all of its positive impacts in the new year.”

What they said

U.S. Senators Tim Kaine and Mark Warner in a joint statement called the study “a necessary down payment before any construction work can begin on Tangier to use navigational dredged material to address the loss of habitat and eroding shoreline, the impacts of sea level rise, recurrent coastal flooding, and coastal storms.”

Warner called the 117th Congress “the most productive Congress in modern history,” saying, “(I)t’s only fitting that we wrap up it up by enacting a consequential government funding package that will continue to strengthen and build on this progress.”

“This bill funds essential community projects in Virginia to the tune of $200 million dollars, and it supports hard-working families by increasing access to affordable child care, housing, high-speed internet, and start-up capital in underserved communities. This law will provide needed protections to pregnant workers, lower drug costs, and improve access to mental health care. Importantly, I’m proud that this bill will ensure a more resilient military right here at home, while reaffirming our commitment to the Ukrainian fight for democracy and against authoritarianism,” Warner said.

Congress last year restarted a process formerly called earmarks and now termed community project funding, which allows legislators to request dedicated federal funding for specific local projects.

nesses are facing and what they are suffering from — some of the highest energy prices that we've seen in decades.”

Hickman joined Dan Alasaker, chairman of Broadway Group and owner of seven truck stops in Washington, Idaho, and Montana; Jeff Eshelman, president and chief executive officer of the Independent Petroleum Association of America; and Donna Jackson, director of membership development for Project 21, a conservative group focusing on minority rights, on the panel.

Rodgers said elected officials on the committee “want to hear from the voices on the ground” about the issue of rising energy costs.

“Today we have people who represent critical sectors of our economy,” she said of the panelists.

Hickman told the committee 2022 saw the most devastating cost increases that he has seen in his 48 years of farming, citing as one example an 186% increase in the cost of diesel fuel over the previous year.

His tractors burn 10 to 14 gallons of diesel per hour and typically operate 12 hours a day.

“We often have four or five tractors running each day during production season,” he said.

Irrigation pumps burn five to seven gallons of diesel per hour and often run 24 hours a day three or four days at a time during summer.

Additionally, the farm uses propane to dry harvested grains.

The price of propane went from $1.06 to $1.61 per gallon in the last year, Hickman said.

Gasoline prices went from $2.00 per gallon in early 2021 to $3.71 in August 2022.

“While the fuel increases were staggering, fertilizer prices and availability were far worse,” he said.

Most of the East Coast supply of natural gas, which provides nitrogen for fertilizer, came from Russia and Belarus prior to the start of Russia's war against Ukraine.

“The sudden loss of that supply in March drove the price from $227 a ton to $640 a ton by May of 2022,” Hickman said.

The price of potash, another fertilizer component, increased from $355 per ton in January 2021 to $855 per ton in October 2022.

The farm's overall fertilizer costs were 225% higher in 2022 than the previous year.

“This is not sustainable,” he said.

Hickman also noted trucking rates increased and trucks at times were not available; he said regulations have driven many independent truck drivers out of the business.

Additionally, polypropylene bags used to pack potatoes are made from natural gas and went from 12 cents to 16 cents per bag.

“Agriculture is directly affected by energy and petroleum,” Hickman said.

Energy price increases directly affect food prices, he said.

“This is the most perilous time for American agriculture,” Hickman said.

He called for more domestic natural gas production to allow for more fertilizer production in the United States.

“We've got to have a reasonably priced energy policy. ... We've got to have a strong domestic supply,” he said.

Hickman said increased costs increase risks for farmers.

“We don't want to be dependent on foreign countries for our food supply,” he said.

Hickman in May 2020 also spoke during a televised event at the White House with then-President Donald Trump, at which a relief program for farmers affected by the COVID-19 pandemic was announced.

Wallops employee gets jail time in road-rage shooting

BY NANCY DRURY DUNCAN
Eastern Shore Post

An Accomack County man will spend 30 days in jail for firing a semi-automatic weapon from the passenger seat of a vehicle while his girlfriend drove.

Joshua Ryan Bale, 23, of Onancock, was sentenced in Accomack Circuit Court for his role in the November 2020 road-rage incident.

“He was ahead of you — I don’t understand why you didn’t just slow down,” Circuit Judge W. Revell Lewis III told Bale, whose vehicle was passing an erratic driver when the shooting occurred.

“You could have just stopped. You shot your gun to intimidate people,” Lewis said.

Defense attorney Thomas Norment Jr., who represented Bale, said his client had a job with a federal security clearance at Wallops.

“He knows he shouldn’t have done it,” said Norment. “He was young and there was no injury.”

Bales’ girlfriend testified she was driving his Ford F-250 pickup truck when the late-night incident occurred.

She said they were returning from camping in Melfa when a vehicle pulled out in front of her in Tasley.

She said the driver drove across the roundabout rather than around it. She said she attempted to pass it on Merry Branch Road.

“He came over into my lane right behind me. I was terrified,” Bale’s girlfriend testified.

She said Bale fired the shots out the passenger-side window into a field and not at the other truck as she passed.

“I was scared, I just wanted him to get away from us,” his girlfriend said.

Bales testified the vehicle pulled out in front of them from the parking lot at the Food Bank.

The man driving the other truck reported the shooting to police. He said a Ford pickup truck came up behind him at a high rate of speed with bright headlights on and honking his horn.

He told police the truck passed him and the driver fired six to eight shots as he went by, said Commonwealth’s Attorney Spencer Morgan at the trial.

Bale was identified from information obtained from security cameras at a grading shed on Mink Farm Road, where the shooting occurred.

He was originally charged with several felonies. In an agreement with the commonwealth, Bale pleaded guilty to three misdemeanor counts of reckless handling of a firearm and one count of brandishing. The felony charges were not prosecuted.

Morgan said he entered into the plea agreement because both officers investigating the incident were no longer in this area.

“The defendant needs to see the inside of a jail for at least a little bit to understand the seriousness of the situation,” Morgan told the court.

He said Bale lied when first questioned by police and was still not being straightforward.

“His explanation doesn’t support the facts,” said Morgan.

Lewis sentenced Bale to 12 months on one count of reckless handling of a firearm with all but 30 days suspended.

He was sentenced to 12 months on the other three charges with all time suspended and was ordered to be on supervised probation for two years and on good behavior for three years.

He was ordered not to use marijuana or any illegal drugs. His firearm will be forfeited.

Kiggans takes oath as member of Congress

BY CAROL VAUGHN

Eastern Shore Post

Jen Kiggans in the early morning hours Saturday took the oath of office as a member of the U.S. House of Representatives representing Virginia's Second District.

Kiggans took the oath after Kevin McCarthy, a Republican from California, became the 55th Speaker of the House in the House's 15th vote, following a historic four-day impasse.

Kiggans is serving her first term in Congress.

The Second District includes the Eastern Shore, Virginia Beach, part of Chesapeake, and Southampton, Isle of Wight, Suffolk, and Franklin City.

"It is the honor of a lifetime to represent my fellow Virginians in Congress. Regardless of whether or not you voted for me, I can assure you that I will work to serve you every day as your Representative in our nation's capital," Kiggans said in a statement released Saturday.

"My mission is to bring civility, competence, and common sense to this legislative body and provide all Virginians with the strong, independent leadership in Washington they deserve," she continued, adding, "Though the debate that played out this week was frustrating, it was worth the wait, and our hard-fought majority can now move forward, united, with purpose.

"I look forward to fighting for policies that will address the issues impacting the everyday lives of the 740,000 people who call the Second District home. From lowering the cost of living for hardworking families, to restoring law and order, to rebuilding American strength and delivering for our service members and veterans, I'm ready to get to work."

Kiggans ran for a public office for the first time in 2019, winning a seat in the Virginia Senate representing Virginia's

Because of redistricting, the 7th District will become the new 22nd District in the 2023 race.

Virginia Beach Councilman Aaron Rouse (D) defeated retired Navy Lt. Commander Kevin Adams (R) in a special election Jan. 10 to fill the Virginia Senate seat left vacant by Kiggans.

After earning a degree from Boston University in International Relations, Kiggans taught English in public high schools in Matsuyama, Japan, for a year before joining the Navy.

Kiggans was a helicopter pilot in the U.S. Navy for 10 years beginning in 1995, including two deployments to the Persian Gulf.

She then went back to school under the G.I. Bill and became a board-certified geriatric nurse practitioner. She is a graduate of Old Dominion University's Nursing School and Vanderbilt University's Nurse Practitioner program.

She has worked in several long-term care and nursing facilities in Virginia Beach and Norfolk and as primary care provider for a small private practice in Virginia Beach.

SERVING VIRGINIA'S EASTERN SHORE

THE PAPER'S POSITION

Research shows ills of earlier school times

Because of a countywide school scheduling change, Accomack County's high school students will have to be in class each day at 7:15 a.m. — 15 minutes earlier than the previous start time.

That seems very early for teenage students, especially considering the bus ride and the morning routine could have some students waking up well before 6 a.m.

More troubling, the school board's decision also is a direct contradiction of many studies showing later school start times are actually better for high-school-aged students.

We couldn't find a study that correlated earlier school start times with better classroom performance — or any other positive outcomes for adolescents. In fact, it is just the opposite.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends middle and high school students start school at 8:30 a.m. or later so they get the sleep they need.

A University of Rochester Medical Center study found teenagers with school start times before 8:30 a.m. "may be at particular risk" of experiencing depression and anxiety.

Other studies show a lack of sleep for teenagers can be traced to everything from poor health to increased automobile accidents.

We expect school board members to make decisions that are rooted in sound research.

And we expect our taxpayer-funded educational professionals — who are experts at trends in education and specialists in adolescent growth — to speak up, counseling and advising our school board members.

Guest columnist

I love the start of a new year! It's a great time to reflect on the events and accomplishments from the past but also time to plan and dream up exciting ideas for the future.

The year 2022 was a great year for the Museum of Chincoteague Island.

We hosted visitors from around the globe, reignited our Road Scholar programs, updated the museum inside and out, renovated the Miles Hancock workshop, celebrated the 100th anniversary of Chincoteague's causeway, and had several fundraisers and community events like the Christmas Tree Village and Buckaroo Bingo.

So what are the plans for 2023? Right now, the museum staff and volunteers are as busy as ever.

Guest columns and letters

The Eastern Shore Post welcomes your letters and guest columns. Letters have no more than 350 words. Guest columns have no more than 500 words.

Letters and columns must include a phone number and a town of residence for verification. They must not have been submitted to or published by any other media.

Letters and guest columns may be edited. It is preferred that letters and guest columns refer to Eastern Shore Post content or Eastern Shore of Virginia issues. No more than one letter or column per person will be printed during a 90-day period.

There are several new exhibits being created as I write this. A new exhibit focusing on Chincoteague's influence in literature, culture, and history ical events is being assembled, Misty and Stormy are getting their display updated, Chincoteague businesses from the past will be highlighted in an Island Enterprise exhibit, and Heritage Days is returning with a special presentation being planned for this spring to commemorate and remember Camp Fletcher, a World War II base on Chincoteague, including an archeological dig on the site.

Tuesday night lectures will return in March and will run weekly through the fall. Lectures on shipwrecks, pirates, decoy carving, ponies, and many more topics are planned.

If you are reading this, you probably already know what a special place the Museum of Chincoteague Island is. I am proud to share the stories and help to protect the artifacts for future generations.

These are priceless memories that the museum is presenting and it is an honor to be a part of the story. I would

When Martin Luther King Jr. visited Eastern Shore

In 2005, I had the pleasure of hearing the Rev. H. Edward Whitaker remember the weekend his divinity school friend, Martin Luther King Jr., spent in Northampton County.

Ted Shockley

It was the fall of 1950, and King wasn't yet the famous orator and Nobel Peace Prize-winning civil rights leader that everyone remembers today. He was an ordained minister, but he hadn't yet earned his doctorate from Boston University.

Then, King was 21 years old and always trying to find a date, said Whitaker, a resident of Fairview, near Cheriton, who died in 2012 at the age of 94.

"He was just a normal young man constantly looking for a wife," he said.

I have always been intrigued that King spent the night with Whitaker in Northampton County and delivered a sermon at First Baptist Church near Capeville.

Alice B. Brown, a retired 39-year Northampton County teacher, also recalled King's visit — and remembered how much her late father, the Rev. J.H. Brinkley, liked the young man with the big ideas on how everyone should get along. Brown died in 2016 at the age of 90.

"He was really something," said Brown of King. "My father enjoyed him so much."

Here's how the story went:

After Whitaker finished school at Virginia Union University, he enrolled at Crozier Theological Seminary in Chester, Pa.

It's also where King had enrolled after earning an undergraduate degree at Atlanta's Morehouse College at age 19.

Whitaker, who was married and a World War II veteran, was much older than King, but they enjoyed a friendship.

One fall weekend more than 70 years ago, King came to Northampton County and stayed at the Fairview home of Whitaker's in-laws, Arthur P. and Vera Banks.

During the visit, he also addressed the congregation at First Baptist.

The following spring, Whitaker traveled to Atlanta to meet King's family. The Eastern Shore native even delivered a sermon at Atlanta's Ebenezer Baptist Church — where King had delivered his very first sermon four years earlier.

Brown traveled to Pennsylvania that year to attend the Crozier graduation. Brown, a former mayor of Cape Charles, remembers having coffee in an on-campus eatery with King and the Whitakers.

In the years that followed, Whitaker and King spoke frequently on the phone and at each other's churches.

Many folks have met somebody "famous." But how many of us can say we've befriended one of the largest figures in American history?

By 1959, when King came to Princess Anne, Md., to give the commencement at what was then called Maryland State College, he'd survived three attacks on his life — one bombing, one attempted bombing, and one knife attack.

King became the then-and-forever face of the civil-rights movement, making his old friend proud in the process.

"I think of him quite often," said Whitaker, whose ministerial career took him to Niagara Falls, Boston, and Brooklyn, among other places.

"A lot of things we discussed in the past have come to pass."

Brown had a hunch that King would have a role in something big.

"I told my father, 'That young man is going to go places,'" she said.

RICHMOND '23

General Assembly convenes for its short session

This is Rob Bloxom with my first Capitol Report from Richmond.

Delegate Rob Bloxom

The 2023 General Assembly began Jan. 11 and is the short, 45-day session.

This is a budget adjustment year when the governor adjusts the second year of the two-year budget.

Since Virginia constitutionally has to have a balanced budget, the adjustments could be up or down, depending on revenues.

Revenues are up again this year, mainly due to the federal government spending packages.

Gov. Glenn Youngkin has asked for an additional $1 billion for tax relief to add to the $4 billion we gave last year to Virginia taxpayers.

This will be the starting point for negotiations.

The other interesting situation of this year's session is that it is an election year.

There are 140 members in the House of Delegates and Senate, all of whom will be required to run in newly drawn districts because of the new census.

This nonpartisan redistricting has drawn many of the sitting legislators into the same district.

There are 40 districts in which incumbents are challenging one another.

I bring this to your attention because a lot of issues might not be decided on a partisan divide but because of the election pairing.

My prediction is there will be legislation to provide mail pieces in the primary races or for use in the fall election that will not pass.

There will be legislation to solve a problem that will be a nonpartisan vote that should pass.

The budget will have to be balanced, but other than that, I don't think a lot of policy will change.

In the next few weeks I will address the legislation for which I will be patron as well my budget proposals.

I am happy to meet with the many constituents coming from the Eastern Shore and Hampton Roads and listen to their specific interests.

I encourage you to take a look at the bills that are being considered during the 2023 Virginia House of Delegates session at <https://lis.virginia.gov/> and follow along with the live stream committee and floor sessions.

As always, I welcome any questions or concerns at my district office at 757-824-3456 or email me at delrbloxom@house.virginia.gov

Civility one of Shore's top qualities. Let's not lose it

Where civility is practiced, people tend to get along and conflict is kept at a minimum. Lose that civility, that common courtesy, and the breakdowns begin in small ways but grow until society begins to sour.

David Lozell
Martin

The use of the car horn is one civility sign. In the city, blasts of car horns are commonplace. In addition to legitimate horn uses, city drivers blow their horns because they're blowing their stacks. The horn is often used as a supplement to a rude finger gesture.

Moving from the city to a rural area, you seldom hear that angry, sustained blaring of car horns.

Instead, you hear quick beeps as people use their horn to say hello to friends they recognize walking down the street.

Small-town people will also use two quick beeps as a way of signing off when they're leaving a house where they've been visiting. Service people will also use the two-beep signal to say good-bye, we're done for the day.

But is the Shore losing its horn civility? Recently, a man from Onancock was sentenced to 30 days in jail for a road rage incident near Tasley that began with one driver blaring his horn at another and ended with shots being fired.

Across the U.S., road rage incidents are responsible for hundreds of lives being lost and tens of thousands of injuries.

Incivility and rage are not confined to roadways. People become rude and then violent in stores, sport venues, and fast-food restaurants.

To avoid the negative outcomes of a lack of civility, consider what you could and should do in these situations:

■ Someone ahead of you in a busy grocery line decides to pay by check but then can't find his checkbook, or a pen, or his identification.

You could roll your eyes, harrumph loudly enough for the person to hear, and glare if the person looks at you.

You should remain patient and, if the bumbling person writing the check looks at you, you should smile and indicate no problem.

■ Someone is driving slowly on a 55 mph two-lane road and you're unable to pass.

You could drive right up to them and stay on their bumper to ensure they know you're in a hurry.

You should drop back once you realize you can't pass.

■ You're about to pull into a parking space when someone slips in front of you and takes the spot.

You could blare your horn and give a finger signal.

You should accept that some people are jerks and then take a deep breath and get on with life.

■ As you're about to open a door to a crowded store, someone bumps into you and grabs for the handle.

You could bump the person back and refuse to relinquish the handle.

You should say, "Excuse me," and then open the door for the person and tell him, "After you."

Being courteous comes with at least three benefits.

One, acts of civility usually lower tension and help avoid escalation into violence. Two, being courteous often leads the other person to respond with courtesy. Three, being civil makes you a better person.

Hopkins store gets fresh coat of paint

The Historic Hopkins & Bro. Store and Ticket Office are lighting up the town of Onancock with a fresh coat of blue paint.

Renovations on this cornerstone of Eastern Shore history goes deeper than just new paint on the beloved buildings; the property also has new signage, restored original windows, refreshed trim and siding, and more maintenance projects on the horizon.

Hopkins & Bro. Store operated from 1842 through 1965 under four generations of the founder, Stephen Hopkins. During its peak as a maritime trading center, the town dock as we know it today was called "Hopkins Wharf."

Several warehouses and offices were part of the wharf like the preserved steamboat ticket office adjacent to the store. Although the building has been in its current position in town since 1970, it was moved twice before finding its current home at the end of Onancock Creek. Originally, the building was located near the towering sycamore tree at the foot of King Street.

Today, the building is listed on the Virginia Landmarks Register of Historic Places, the National Register of Historic Places, and is owned and operated by Shore History, founded in 1952 as the Eastern Shore of Virginia Historical Society.

"The completion of this exterior renovation can largely be attributed to the support of our Eastern Shore community and its continued commitment to ensure the preservation of our local history and historical landmarks," says Hilary Hartnett-Wilson, executive director of Shore History.

In addition to the support Shore History received from the local community, the organization was awarded two grants to help with this phase of the building's renovation totaling $25,000.

As with all historical properties, the preservation of the Hopkins and Bro. Store and the Ticket Office is ongoing. The public can support these preservation efforts through Shore History's naming rights campaign, Dash for the Sash. Contributors are included on a lobby donor appreciation plaque and recognition on the window of their choice. To learn more and support, call 757-787-8012 or visit shorehistory.org/special-project

Grand jury will weigh charges in multi-slaying spree

Allegedly used in crimes, pistol located behind Arcadia High

BY NANCY DRURY DUNCAN
Eastern Shore Post

An Accomack County grand jury will hear evidence against a New Church man a prosecutor says killed two men and set fire to a home. A general district judge found probable cause to certify to a grand jury multiple charges against 46-year-old Gary Joseph Fleig.”

Fleig is accused of first-degree murder, arson, and burglary in the death of Edward B. Mears Jr., of Oak Hall, on Dec. 4, 2021.

He also is charged in the murder and the shooting death of Maurice Lamont “Rico” Fiddemon two days later.

The crime spree began on Dec. 3, 2021, in Pocomoke City, Md.

Commonwealth’s Attorney Spencer Morgan presented testimony from police officers who responded to both Accomack County incidents.

They said they were dispatched to a field on U.S. Route 13, north of Temperanceville, where they found Fiddemon’s body lying in a pool of blood with lacerations to his fingers and hands.

Officers had reason to suspect Fleig might be involved from information they had received earlier, Morgan said.

They went to his New Church home where he was taken into custody and transported to Accomack.

On the way to the sheriff’s office, as they passed the location where Fiddemon’s body was found, an officer testified Fleig said, “So long Rico,” as they drove by.

A few days later when Fleig was in jail, he told the officer, “I’ve got a lot to tell you.”

The officer said Fleig told him he knew about a house fire and a murder that had occurred a few days earlier.

He said Fleig knew the location of the murder weapon. Fleig took them to a location behind Arcadia High School where they found the .9mm handgun used in both killings.

Fleig told police he, his son, and Rico Fiddemon were in his car. He said his son and Fiddemon did not get along.

The officer testified Fleig said he stopped the car and his son and Fiddemon got out and continued quarreling.

He told the officer he shot Fiddemon because he thought Fiddemon had a gun and did not want his son to get shot.

On Dec. 4, 2021, firefighters were called to a house fire on U.S. Route 13 in Oak Hall. When they arrived, they found a man dead inside the home.

“He had a large wound on the left side of his face,” said an EMT who was at the scene.

He said the victim had two small holes on his face, one on his cheek and one on his chin.

“There was no sign of life,” he told the court.

In another interview with police, Fleig told them the gun used in the slaying of Mears belonged to Mears and that the same gun was used to kill Fiddemon.

He told the officer that he and several others went to Mears’ home to burglarize it.

Fleig said Mears reached into the pocket of his bathrobe and he was afraid of getting shot, so he shot Mears.

He said they took jewelry, coins, and toilet paper from the house.

He said they used charcoal lighters found there to start the fire that burned the house.

After hearing the commonwealth’s evidence and from defense attorney Jon Thornbrugh, Substitute Judge Croxton Gordon certified the charges to a grand jury.

Counties select new supervisory leadership for 2023

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

The Accomack County Board of Supervisors at its organizational meeting Wednesday, Jan. 4, elected Robert Crockett as chairman for 2023.

Crockett was chosen by unanimous vote. Harrison Phillips was elected vice chairman, also by unanimous vote.

The board of supervisors also approved its code of ethics and rules of procedure for 2023.

The board voted to hold regular monthly meetings the third Wednesday of each month at 5 p.m., moving the meeting place back to the board chambers in the county administration building in Accomac.

The board had been meeting in more spacious quarters at the cafeteria of Metompink Elementary School since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Supervisors also voted to hold work sessions as needed on the first Wednesday of the month at 5 p.m.

In Northampton County, John Coker was voted in as chairman of the board of supervisors.

Oliver Bennett was selected as vice chairman.

Supervisors allow school board to carry over $2.7M

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

The Accomack County Board of Supervisors took action on three matters after holding public hearings at the Dec. 14, 2022, meeting.

The board approved allowing the school board to carry over around $2.7 million in remaining budgeted local funds to the current fiscal year. The practice began in fiscal year 2018.

No one spoke at a public hearing.

The amount carried over increased significantly during fiscal year 2020, with the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic and resulting school closures.

At the end of fiscal year 2022 (June 30), the accumulated total was $11.1 million, with the current request to carry over an additional $2.7 million not spent in fiscal year 2022.

The board's approval means the total amount set aside in the assigned fund balance is now $13.8 million.

The school board's proposed use of the carryover funds for capital projects includes $7.5 million for office space, along with improvements such as new roofs and parking lots at several schools, playground improvements, restroom improvements, athletic field lighting at the high schools, and various equipment, among others.

Private street ordinance

The Accomack County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved an amendment to the subdivision ordinance to allow private streets to remain private in certain developed residential subdivisions.

The amendment includes a provision that, if there is no homeowners association, a simple majority of property owners must be in favor of keeping the roads private.

Supervisor Donald Hart asked what prompted the proposed amendment, noting the poor condition of private roads in some subdivisions has been a problem.

Hart said he would like to see more subdivision streets made public, saying there are three subdivisions in his district where private street conditions are "awful."

"You have people in situations where fire trucks and ambulances will not go down the road," he said.

Maxie Brown, interim zoning administrator, noted she started the position after the ordinance revision process had begun, but said, "There is some indication that there are some subdivisions in the county that fit under under this scenario and ... it needs to be addressed by ordinance."

Supervisor Ron Wolff said the amendment addresses "a specific situation" in which "there were some mistakes made by the county" when a certain subdivision was platted.

"In an attempt to try to right that wrong, this is pretty much the result of that," he said.

Crockett said he could go along with the amendment only "in order to clean up a problem that we played a part in."

The subdivision referred to apparently is Olde Mill Pointe, near Horn town, according to the only speaker at the public hearing.

Supervisor Reneta Major agreed with Hart and asked how many subdivisions the ordinance could affect.

Conceding that the situation is better than it once was due to rural road additions by the highway department in some subdivisions, Major said that, still, "We sure have a whole bunch of private roads that are horrific."

Accomack County Attorney Jan Proctor said the subdivision ordinance now requires private roads to be constructed to state highway department standards.

The amendment includes provisions that the subdivision plats had to have been approved and the private streets not been made public before the date the amended ordinance was adopted, Cropper said.

Beth Onley spoke in favor of the amendment, saying she was the first resident of the Olde Mill Pointe subdivision. She is treasurer of the property owners association board.

The developer turned over the property owners association to residents in January 2020, she said.

"We have 80 lots which are owned by 67 individuals and we currently have 29 houses, two of which are in construction," Onley said.

Of the owners, 75% signed a petition in support of the ordinance amendment. The plan is to have a construction company come in and to develop a long-range plan to maintain the private roads in the subdivision, Onley said.

Tax relief

The Accomack County Board of Supervisors did not approve extending tax relief for personal vehicles to more members of volunteer fire companies, as had been proposed.

According to the motion made by Supervisor Robert Crockett and approved unanimously by the board, the matter was deferred until the board discusses the fiscal year 2023 budget, starting in February 2023.

The ordinance amendment would have extended tax relief to elected officers of fire companies and to members who regularly perform other duties, in addition to those who regularly respond to fire or ambulance calls.

An ordinance the board approved last September gave vehicle tax relief to active first responders who regularly respond to calls, in an effort to aid volunteer fire companies in recruiting and retaining volunteers.

The Fire Commission had asked that tax relief be extended to other members.

Milton E. Bull

Mr. Milton E. Bull, 91, of Exmore, departed this life on Sunday, Jan. 1, 2023, at Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital in Onancock.

Born in Wardtown, Milton was the beloved son of the late Annie B. Kelam and and the late Henry Bull. He was affectionately known as “Sonny” by his family and friends. Milton was married to the late Verneta “Jean” Bull.

He was educated in the Northampton County Public Schools. Once he was eligible, he was drafted into the U.S. Army, where he served from 1952 to 1954. After completing his military obligation, he returned back home and began to work for a contractor named William C. Fray. Years later, he worked for Retallack and Springs Underground Utilities, which was in the same job field.

Milton began hauling metal, due to being laid off every winter, in order to make ends meet. As a result, this led him to start his own salvage business. He became known as the “junk man” on the Shore and the rest is history.

Cooper Jr. a grant in the amount of $59,121 for local records preservation. The funds will be used to conserve: Deeds, Wills, Etc. 1715-1729, Part 2; Marriage Records 1 & 2, 1805-1855; Orders 1714-1717; Surveyor’s Record 4, 1807-1818; Surveyor’s Record 5, 1818-1831; Wills & C 1692-1715, Part 2; Wills & C 1692-1715, Part 3, stored in his office. They will also be digitized so they can be made available to the public through the clerk’s online records management system.

“We’re very excited,” said Cooper. “These records are the history of our county. We have an obligation to make sure that they are available for future generations.”

'You've got to treat people like you want to be treated'

Lisa Cypress aims to set record straight on Accawmacke Indian lands, contributions

BY STEFANIE JACKSON
Eastern Shore Post

A lawsuit that seeks to return land in Eastville to the Accawmacke Indians is stalled, but in the meantime, the plaintiff is seeking to do good in the community.

"We move forward. ... We're just going to try to work on ... doing positive things," said Lisa Cypress, who lives in Georgia but is a direct descendant of the Accawmacke Indians.

One example of the "positive things" the Accawmacke Indians are doing is a trip they made this fall to Indian-town Park in Eastville to clean up the gravesite of a tribal chief for American Indian Heritage Month.

Cypress and others also promoted the organization of a free Thanksgiving dinner in Northampton County in honor of Shirley Mitchell Christian, a locally well-known cook and caterer.

In December, Cypress shared news of a performance in New York City of "Ye Bear and Ye Cubb," the first play performed in America — at a tavern in Pungoteague in 1665.

With Cypress' blessing, Afro-indigenous Accawmacke Indians were included in the cast.

Her priorities have shifted since September, when she was in the thick of protests over property she alleges was stolen from the Accawmacke Indians.

Local resources

Cypress sued the Northampton County Board of Supervisors and PNC Bank in July 2021 for land the parties own in Eastville, including Indian-town Park, which was deeded to her Accawmacke Indian ancestors in 1814 after their reservation was dissolved.

Cypress contends that the chain of ownership through which the lawsuit's defendants came to possess the property contains errors and even fraud.

Since the lawsuit was filed, little has occurred in the case in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

Cypress has amended her complaint several times as her research uncovered more direct links between her and her ancestors who owned the former reservation land.

The defendants' attorneys have requested the case be dismissed for several reasons, including a claim that Cypress has not proven she is the rightful owner of the land in question.

On Oct. 5, 2022, the case was reassigned from Judge Roderick Young, a nominee of former President Donald Trump, to Judge Elizabeth Hanes, who was nominated by President Joe Biden and confirmed by the U.S. Senate earlier that year.

So far, no judge has made a decision in the case.

Peaceful protests

Cypress has led peaceful protests in front of PNC Bank in Eastville and attended certain events where she has attempted to correct the historic record relating to the Accawmacke Indians.

She visited Eyre Hall in Cheriton on Sept. 14 for an event prompted by the publication of the book, "The Material World of Eyre Hall: Four Centuries of Chesapeake History," edited by historian Carl Lounsbury.

Cypress said her great-grandmother was raised on the Eyre Hall plantation and has noted that many Accawmacke Indians often have been mislabeled as African American throughout history.

She also visited Ker Place in Onancock on Sept. 29 for a book signing for "The Henry Bagwell Story: English Adventurer, Virginia Planter 1589-1663," by Margaret A. Rice.

Cypress disagrees with the book's interpretation of historical records and says that Henry Bagwell is among her Accawmacke Indian ancestors, and she can back up her claim with birth and marriage records.

She said her sister, Penny Cypress, had a dispute at Ker Place with the event coordinator. After Lisa Cypress had brought protest signs to the event and confronted the author about her research, both sisters were "kicked out" of the venue.

Cypress added that local law enforcement responded to the incident.

Cypress said it is "really important" to tell her side of the story.

'Hope and happiness'

Right now, the activist is taking a break from protesting. Instead, she's

Schools release schedule

The Accomack County School Board voted at its Jan. 3 meeting to revise the 2022-2023 school calendar to meet the instructional day requirements. Changes are as follows:

■ The school board added 24 minutes to the high school instructional day (six minutes per block), effective Monday, Jan. 9.

■ High school students will need to report at 7:15 a.m. instead of 7:30 a.m. The instructional day will end at 2:30 p.m. rather than at 2:23 p.m.

■ There will be no changes in the length of the instructional day for all elementary and middle school students.

■ The end of the first semester will be Feb. 3.

■ Feb. 6 will be a teacher workday.

The second semester will start on Feb. 7 and utilize the new high school schedule.

Presidents Day, which is Feb. 20, and the Monday after spring break, April 10, will no longer be vacation days.

The last day for all students is Monday, June 12, instead of Friday, June 9.

Those interested can view the revised school calendar by visiting the Accomack County Public School website or school websites.

looking forward to the future, when she anticipates the Accawmacke Indians will recover the land they lost.

“Hope and happiness and unity. That’s what I’m looking for,” Cypress said.

That “good stuff” includes the Accawmacke Indians using their land to develop businesses and attract tourists to the historic town of Eastville, building wealth for all of its disadvantagged citizens, regardless of their color or race, according to Cypress.

“We want ... to be able to reclaim what’s ours,” but the Accawmacke Indians have no intent to remove people from their homes, Cypress said.

“But at the same time ... that whole passing on something that’s not yours, that probably needs to end,” she said.

If the Accawmacke Indians were granted occupied land, they would want those residents to stay, Cypress said.

“You’ve got to treat people like you want to be treated.”

Grant will rehab Onancock's forlorn Lilliston Building

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

Onancock was awarded $1 million by the state to rehabilitate the Lilliston Building downtown.

The building at 40 Market St., which formerly housed the Accomack Department of Social Services and before that held retail establishments, has been vacant for nearly 20 years.

The plan is to turn it into a mixed-use structure, with commercial use on the first floor and six residential units on the second floor.

The project could be a catalyst for re-energizing downtown Onancock, officials say.

Two businesses have committed to locating in the building once renovations are complete, bringing at least 20 new jobs to town, according to a narrative on the Virginia Department of Housing and Community Development website.

A press release from the nonprofit organization Onancock Main Street described the building as the "most centrally located and visibly blighted structure in the town's downtown district.

Gov. Glenn Youngkin announced the award late last month. It is among more than $24.7 million awarded to 22 Industrial Revitalization Fund grant projects in Virginia.

The program is targeted toward vacant commercially zoned structures where their poor condition creates physical and economic blight to the surrounding area.

"This grant is a major advancement to incentivize investment in our downtown while improving the vibrancy and attractiveness of Onancock to residents and tourists," said Matt Spuck, Onancock town manager.

"Availability of funding is the primary reason business owners do not rehabilitate and occupy derelict structures," Spuck said, adding, "This grant changes that. In the near-term, this grant transforms an abandoned building into a hub of vibrancy in the heart of downtown. In the future, as monies are paid back to the town from this project, those funds are available to loan others for similar projects. The current impact and the long-term benefit of this grant will help Onancock become exactly what it is supposed to be."

Spuck said the grant demonstrates the power of a shared commitment between the town and Onancock Main Street to achieve the goal of improving the town.

The money was obtained through a partnership between the town and Onancock Main Street, according to the release.

The grant will create a pool of money that will be a source of revolving, low-interest loans to developers who want to renovate other vacant, blighted commercial buildings in Onancock.

Virginia's 22 projects will create more than 600 jobs and leverage an additional $72.8 million in public and private investment and include five mixed-use projects that will create nearly 200 new residential units.

Since 2012, the IRF program has funded 38 projects, which have generated more than $121 million in other public and private investment and resulted in the creation of more than 485 jobs across Virginia.
