County mulls pay increases for employees

BY STEFANIE JACKSON BOWMANN
Eastern Shore Post

Northampton supervisors are considering approving raises for county employees but are waiting for staff to complete further research before voting on the matter.

The goal is to provide “competitive salaries to attract and retain” employees in “every position ... county attorney ... custodial services, people cutting the grass, people who process the permits,” said Finance Director John Chandler on Sept. 24.

Northampton’s latest salary study was completed in 2019 at a cost of about

Knowing the three components of early detection may save your life or the life of those you love.

Clinical Breast Exam

At age 25, have a clinical breast exam performed by your health care provider every three years, then yearly beginning age 40.

Mammograms

Begin annual screening mammograms at age 40; earlier if you are at high risk due to personal or family history. Tomosynthesis, otherwise known as a 3D mammogram, is encouraged.

Breast Self-Awareness

You know what is normal for your breasts. A change does not always indicate breast cancer. Still, be alert for the following:

- A lump in the breast or under the arm
- Skin changes, including a dimple, redness, or thickening
- Change in breast shape or size
- Nipple discharge
- Scaling or redness of the nipple and/or areola
- Nipple retraction or deviation
- New breast pain

If you notice any of these signs or something that doesn't look or feel quite right, notify your health care provider immediately.

The earlier breast cancer is detected, the easier it is to treat.

One in eight women will be diagnosed with breast cancer in their lifetime. Screenings help find cancer early, before you have any signs or symptoms.

$30,000.

Accomack County recently had a salary study done, but it was not yet publicly available during Northampton County's latest budget season.

When the Accomack study was published, "it just started the whole conversation" about salary increases in Northampton, Chandler said.

Accomack County employees received salary increases of approximately 10%, he said.

Since Northampton's last salary study was just five years ago, instead of requesting a new study, the finance director used the Accomack study to determine how the salaries of Northampton's county employees compare.

Chandler said "the very first thing that jumped out" was that Accomack County employees are paid a minimum of $15 per hour.

Considering the effects of inflation and that major employers such as Perdue Farms are offering starting pay of $16 per hour, "$15 an hour is certainly a good place to start," he said.

Around 35 of Northampton's 235 county employees earn less than $15 an hour.

Of those 235 employees, about 80 work part time and 155 work full time, Chandler said.

The lowest wage Northampton County currently pays is $13.98 per hour.

Chandler recommended increasing the pay of every county employee by $1 per hour so that the lowest paid employees would earn at least $15 per hour.

He explained that giving a $1-per-hour increase across the board will help to avoid salary compression — a phenomenon in which the pay of newer, less-experienced employees nears or exceeds the pay of employees with greater experience or skills.

Chandler said that giving all employees the same hourly increase benefits lower-wage workers more because that increase is a greater percentage of their total pay.

For example, giving an extra $2,000 a year to someone with an annual salary of $40,000 is a 5% increase, but giving $2,000 more to someone earning $60,000 annually is an increase of a little more than 3%.

The proposal includes moving up certain positions one pay grade, including Northampton County sheriff's communications officers, EMS advanced providers — who are now certified to perform additional services, and the building inspector position that has been "advertised for years and years and years," Chandler said.

The change in pay grades would result in raises between roughly $2,000 and $4,000 for each of those positions, depending on experience.

The proposal includes moving Chandler's position of finance director up to the same pay grade as the deputy county administrator, which would result in a raise between approximately $7,000 and $11,000, depending on experience.

Also proposed are additional pay grades for certain positions such as office coordinator.

An office coordinator would be paid as an office coordinator I or office coordinator II, depending on the employee's skill set.

The change "rewards the people who have a lot of talent," Chandler said.

Other affected positions would include deputy registrar, building and zoning technician, and permit technician.

The cost to implement the salary adjustments would be approximately $568,000 annually.

If the raises were given starting in November, they would cost an additional $375,000 in the current fiscal year.

Chandler suggested funding the raises with income that exceeded what was budgeted in fiscal year 2024.

For example, Northampton earned $561,000 more interest income in FY 2024 than anticipated.

Other excess income in FY 2024 included $215,000 in ambulance fees, $113,000 in fines, $110,000 in waste collections, and $50,000 in courthouse security fees.

The salary issue was placed on the agenda for the Oct. 8 Northampton supervisors meeting but was removed before the meeting began.

EXMORE

Exmore hears positives of battery facility

BY STEFANIE JACKSON BOWMANN

Eastern Shore Post

A company seeking to build a 10-megawatt battery energy storage system in Exmore presented to the town council on Monday, Oct. 7, hoping to sway the council's opinion after Exmore's planning commission voted unanimously to deny the company a special-use permit for the project on Sept. 23.

"If you can't see it, smell it, or hear it, it's a good project," said attorney Steve Romine, speaking for Exmore Energy Storage 1, an affiliate of Patterson Enterprises Inc.

Evan Bierman, president of Great Power, the battery supplier for the Exmore project, said his company's products are manufactured using the latest, safest technologies, unlike a chemical company that has made headlines for disasters such as batteries catching fire.

He said the other company uses 10-year-old technology and makes its batteries with nickel, manganese, and cobalt, which are "toxic," chemically reactive elements.

Great Power uses iron and graphite in its batteries, which are safer, Bierman said.

He said that instead of grouping the batteries together in a warehouse, each battery is stored in a separate steel container or "lockbox" so that the batteries can't "talk to each other" and start a runaway fire if a battery short-circuits.

The batteries are subjected to the latest testing methods and certifications, resulting in "the safest battery system ever put in," Bierman said.

Romine said the purpose of the 10-megawatt battery facility is "energy arbitrage."

In this process, electricity is purchased and stored when supply is abundant and inexpensive and then sold and resupplied to the grid during peak demand.

Romine said the benefits of the project will include increasing energy storage capacity for emergency use, stabilizing the electrical grid to avoid blackouts and brownouts, and lowering electricity costs for consumers.

He said the battery facility also will economically benefit the town:

■ The company will pay Exmore a siting fee of around $200,000 for allowing the facility in the town. The money could be used to support Exmore's operating budget or capital projects.

■ The town also could, as enabled by Virginia Code, adopt an ordinance to receive a revenue share from the battery energy storage system — $1,400 per megawatt, a total of $14,000 annually.

■ Exmore will collect more real estate tax if the agricultural-zoned property is converted to commercial use.

■ The town will collect business, professional and occupational license, or BPOL, taxes from the facility.

The intended location of the battery energy storage system is on two acres near A&N Electric Cooperative's Kel-lam substation.

A Sept. 30 letter from Patterson Enterprises to the Exmore Town Council stated that the Arizona-based company has been in business for 124 years.

The business has provided a variety of services including installing utilities, developing real estate, and building homes, schools, fire stations, and medical facilities.

"In all our years of business, we have never had a major accident or tragedy strike one of our projects," the letter stated.

Lost class ring found on Cape Charles beach after 30 years

BY BILL STERLING

Special to the Eastern Shore Post

Frankie Brady, 64, who lives outside Cape Charles with his wife, Debbie, started metal detecting in 2011 because his doctor said he should start walking as exercise to help with some health issues.

“I thought if I was going to walk, I might as well do something useful like finding old coins, war relics, and jewelry,” he said. “I have a fairly good collection of found items, including a three-pound cannon ball.”

Walking on Cape Charles beach shortly after Labor Day was more to get in shape than to find anything.

“I’ve walked that beach hundreds of times and never found anything of any value,” Brady said. “Many of the farmers give me permission to search their fields after the crops have been harvested. That’s where I found most of my items.”

But on Tuesday, Sept. 3, his metal detector picked up an object about five inches under the sand while he was walking the beach. He dug it up, rinsed it off, and saw it was a class ring in excellent condition.

“I assumed at first it was lost over the weekend by someone visiting Cape Charles, but then I saw it was a Northampton High School ring from 1994.”

The name inside the ring led him to Jeff Melson, a 1994 graduate of Northampton High School, who is now a chief petty officer in the United States Coast Guard, stationed in Elizabeth City, N.C. A Facebook search soon connected them.

Frankie’s wife, Debbie, called and asked Melson if he was from the Eastern Shore and when the last time he visited was.

He replied that he had been on the Shore a few weeks earlier but had not lost anything, adding that he did lose his high school ring on the Cape Charles beach 30 years ago.

COURTESY PHOTO

Frankie Brady stands with his metal detector, which he used to find a class ring lost 30 years ago on the Cape Charles beach. He is holding a three-pound cannon ball that is among the items he has found.

When Frankie heard that, he could hardly believe it.

“I just about fell out on the floor when I heard it had been lost 30 years ago. It looked like it just came out of the box,” he said.

Frankie doesn’t think the ring has been in that location all that time.

“They dredged the creek last year and pumped some sand on the beach. At least that’s my theory,” he said.

Melson remembers well the day he lost it.

“I left that ring on the beach in the pocket of my girlfriend’s sundress while we were swimming with some friends, and when we came back it was gone,” he said. “We searched and searched for it, but it was nowhere to be found. That was around 1994 or 1995, so for someone to find it in 2024, and the fact that it still looks like it’s brand new is crazy. I definitely never thought I would see it again.”

Melson also appreciates the kindness of the Bradys.

“Debbie and Frankie were nice enough to give the ring to my Mom and Dad (Polly and Dennis Melson), who brought it to me in North Carolina,” he said.

“They refused to take any money for it. I’ve been in the Coast Guard for 25 years since leaving the Shore in 1998, so I got them a military challenge coin from my Chief’s Mess as a token of my appreciation that I will bring them the next time I make it home. I am really thankful to both of them for finding it and then making the effort to return it to me.”

In those 30 years since losing the ring, Melson, 48, now married with two children, has been stationed at the U.S. Coast Guard Air Station in Sacramento, Calif., the Aviation Training Center in Mobile, Ala., and the Coast Guard Aviation Projects Acquisition Center in Waco, Texas, before accepting his current assignment at the U.S. Coast Guard Air Station in Elizabeth City.

Ironically, though he grew up near the water’s edge and then joined the Coast Guard, he has spent no time on a boat, preferring aviation to the seas.

As for Brady, he has spent 43 years working for the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel and is currently a tunnel equipment operator.

He’s set to retire in six months, after which he will spend even more time metal detecting and likely adding to his vast collection of found items.

“It makes you feel good when you can return something to the owner,” Brady said.

SERVING VIRGINIA'S EASTERN SHORE

THE PAPER'S POSITION

October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month

October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month. Domestic violence is an issue that can be uncomfortable to talk about for some, but it is vital to build awareness in our community because domestic violence happens everywhere, even here.

Domestic violence is a societal issue that cuts across racial, economic, religious, ethnic, and educational lines. One in four women and one in seven men will experience severe domestic violence in their lifetime.

The Eastern Shore Coalition Against Domestic Violence and other agencies work to aid survivors, but there is more work to be done in our community.

Many are still surprised to learn that the coalition shelters around 150 people annually and receives roughly 300 hotline calls a year.

This lack of awareness can be seen in convictions related to domestic violence in our local courts.

In August 2023 an Eastern Shore man who was indicted for strangling the mother of his children later had his charges reduced to misdemeanors in Northampton County Circuit Court and served only a month in jail.

Incidents such as this show a clear lack of understanding of the danger survivors face. A survivor of domestic violence who has been strangled by their partner is 750% more likely to be killed by the offender in the next year.

In another case, an area man was also initially charged with strangulation of the mother of his children but pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of assault and battery of a family member. He will not be sentenced for that charge until at least August 2026, according to online court records.

Work has been done in our community to support survivors of domestic violence and help them rebuild their lives, but a broader understanding of the dangers domestic violence poses and the way it impacts our community is clearly needed.

If you or someone you know is experiencing domestic violence, contact the Eastern Shore Coalition Against Domestic Violence's 24/7 hotline at 757-787-1329.

Focus on who we are, not how we vote

To the editor:

This election year I have been asked, "What are you? Republican or Democrat or Independent?"

My answer is this:

It does not matter which party I affiliate with. It does not matter who I vote for or what my ideals, values, and opinions are. It does not matter if I lean a little to the left or a little to the right — or as far in either direction as one can go.

It does not matter what gender I am, where my family immigrated from, what religion I practice, or what my marital status is.

What matters is that I respect you and your opinions, your right to vote for whomever you want, or to not vote, or to switch parties — just as you respect me and my opinions, my right to vote for whomever I like, or not to vote at all, or to switch parties.

Guest columns and letters

The Eastern Shore Post welcomes your letters and guest columns.

Letters and columns must include a phone number and a town of residence for verification.

They must not have been submitted to or published by any other media.

Letters and guest columns may be edited.

It is preferred that letters and guest columns refer to Eastern Shore Post content or Eastern Shore of Virginia issues.

No more than one letter or column per person will be printed during a 90-day period.

Regardless of your beliefs, opinions, ideals, where your family came from, what gender you are, what religion you practice, how old you are, or if you are married or not, what matters is that I respect and care about you as a person — just as you respect and care about me as a person.

We may believe in the exact same things, or just one thing, or nothing at all — it does not matter, for I will not hate you, or tell you that you are wrong, or intimidate or shame you.

I will be happy we can have differences and still stand together, that we could even be friends, that our differences complement each other and our similarities give us a connection.

What matters more than anything is that we came from the same dust, we are unique in our own way, and we shall return to the same dust.

We live in the same country, we have the same rights, we can stand strong together, and we were made equal by the same creator.

What am I, you may ask, during this election year?

My answer is this: I am your fellow American.

Rhonda Hall 'has no place' in school systems

To the editor:

It is with incredulity but no real surprise that I read of the current situation Accomack County Superintendent of Schools Rhonda Hall finds herself embroiled in.

Since my first experience with her as a principal in 1994, I have known this day would come.

The issue was my son's Dallas Cowboys all-weather coat.

This incident occurred on the first day back from Christmas break.

He removed it on the playground, said a child put it on and wouldn't return it.

I asked to see Hall and requested a meeting.

I was asked one question by her, and that was "Did your son have his name sewn in the coat?"

I admitted it was not and her response at that point was: How do you know it's not the other child's?

I said I know because my son told me and he has no coat because the other child is wearing my son's coat.

I asked her if she had asked the child about the incident. She said that was unnecessary.

She said the matter was closed and it was closed for her; however, it was not for me.

Thirty years later, the chicken has come home to roost.

The unacknowledged, unapproved raise of almost $9,000 and an apparent act of non-cooperation with Accomack County Sheriff Todd Wesells in a potential shooting investigation is also in keeping with an official who believes herself above rules others live and work by — accountability, transparency, and a team approach.

It is my hope that this can be set to rights, the raise returned, and for her to voluntarily resign.

She is obviously there only to further her position and personal gain — not to protect the well-being of students, or Accomack County, or the Eastern Shore in general.

This individual has no place in any of our school systems, in any capacity.

Writer will not be voting for Trump

To the editor:

I can't understand how anyone can support former president Donald Trump in the November election. I try to find something good in the man. I can't.

He slept with a porn star while his wife was home pregnant. He was convicted of 34 counts of fraud. A person can have difficulty getting a job as a felon but can run for president? Please explain this to me.

He caused an insurrection. Nothing comes out of his mouth but lies.

It is true that you can fool some of the people all of the time.

Thank God Trump can't fool all of the people all of the time.

Trump policies will help farmers, businesses

To the editor:

Regarding the letter, "A Tale of Two Trumps," by Brian Bloedel in the Sept. 27 edition of the Post, I offer this response.

I'm not sure where the information came from that the "Biden administration policies saved the lives of tens of thousands of people who might otherwise have died under a second Trump term."

The COVID-19 pandemic affected the American people during both the Trump and Biden administrations. We lost many patients with co-morbidities in America when physicians were focused on a regimented treatment protocol.

In my opinion, medical practice is at its best when there is collaboration. It was unfortunate that alternative treatment options were censored at a critical time.

It turns out that two low-cost drugs could have helped save lives. Ivermectin is an FDA-approved, anti-parasitic agent with demonstrated antiviral capabilities against viruses, including SARS-CoV-2.

Hydroxychloroquine is an anti-malarial medication shown to be effective against COVID-19 in some studies, especially when provided at early onset.

As a retired healthcare professional, I have the highest regard for those who work in health care. Many are overworked and overwhelmed by the burden put on them when others opted or were forced to resign because of vaccine mandates.

At a time when people needed to make informed decisions, the vaccine efficacy and safety data were not shared with the American public. Little attention has been given to vaccine deaths and injuries.

Former President Donald Trump worked closely with health care professionals who guided him and continued to guide President Joe Biden. There was much transparency under Trump and there is nothing to indicate that more people would have died during a second Trump term.

We continue to see an economic collapse during the Biden/Harris administration. Although we may have had an edge coming out of the pandemic, we lost it when the energy sector was crippled by shutting down pipelines and imposing stricter regulations on drilling and fracking operations.

The price of natural gas and fossil fuels makes everything that depends on it costlier.

Many business owners and farmers in our area tell me they will not survive a Harris term, given her poor economic policies.

To be good neighbors who feed kids and heat homes, we need sound economic policies that support America's farmers, sustainable energy, and businesses.

The Biden/Harris open border policy continues and the humanitarian crisis builds.

As of July 21, 2024, there are 662,566 noncitizens with criminal histories on the non-detained docket, per Immigration and Customs Enforcement official Patrick Lechleitner. We have reached unprecedented numbers of women, children, and fentanyl being trafficked by cartels. We have seen the Federal Emergency Management Agency unable to respond due to insufficient funds.

If this is not an economic crisis, I truly do not know what one would look like.

When high prices at the grocery store, high housing costs, high amounts of credit card debt for average Americans, and the inability to provide emergency response to American citizens does not match what you are being told about a strong economy, something is wrong.

America has never experienced censorship and false or hidden information like we do today. "We, the people" need to advocate for transparency in our government.

Trump can improve the economy? 'Laughable'

To the editor:

In the Sept. 20 edition of the Eastern Shore Post, Jo Proctor wrote in a letter entitled "Trump will be better for the nation's economy" that the U.S. economy is "in collapse." This is simply not true.

All credible economists say that the U.S. economy is the best in the world with record gross domestic product and Wall Street growth, the lowest unemployment and inflation, and recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic in record time.

Have questions about recent Kiggans advertisement

To the editor:

We recently received a flyer in the mail with this headline: “Whose Side Is Missy Cotter Smasal On?”

It also said, “We need a representative who stands up for our military. Reject Missy Cotter Smasal and the radicals she supports.”

The flyer notes only one alleged “radical,” Elizabeth Warren, whom Smasal endorsed almost five years ago on Facebook, when she was still just a “community leader” in Virginia Beach — and still years away from running for Congress.

The flyer, taking the guilt-by-association approach, claims that Warren “pledged to slash our military budget,” citing only a right-wing think tank (AEI) as its sole “source.”

It does not cite Warren herself, or any official site, or any objective news outlet, but a single opinion piece by AEI’s Giselle Donnelly.

(Side note: Donnelly, who calls herself a military expert, would likely not be allowed to serve in the military under Donald Trump, because she’s transgender. Trump banned trans people from serving during his term, but that ban has since been overturned by the current administration.)

The flyer against Smasal, funded by the Republican Party of Virginia, does not include the name of Jen Kiggans, Smasal’s opponent in the upcoming election for Virginia’s 2nd Congressional District.

The flyer doesn’t cite a single reason to vote for Kiggans; it’s just a trumped-up smear campaign against Smasal.

Speaking of Trump: If the Virginia GOP wants to play the guilt-by-association game, let’s look at Kiggans. Taking the GOP’s “she supports radicals who” approach, here’s what a similar flyer could say about Kiggans, in light of her endorsement of Trump:

■ Kiggans supports the radical who called fallen soldiers “suckers” and “losers.”

■ Kiggans supports the radical who violated the rules at Arlington National Cemetery for a self-serving campaign photo-op at the gravesite of one of our fallen, while grinning and giving a thumbs-up.

■ Kiggans supports the radical who slandered John McCain, a military hero, former POW, and a respected Republican. Why? Because, according to Trump, “I don’t like people who were captured.”

■ Kiggans supports the radical who praised Putin’s invasion of Ukraine and has said Putin can do “whatever the hell he wants” in Eastern Europe.

■ Kiggans supports the radical who wants to stop supporting our NATO allies and is even willing to pull out of NATO — with the NATO Joint Force Command based in Norfolk.

■ Kiggans supports the radical who publicly denigrated a Gold Star family.

■ Kiggans supports the radical who was too vain to be seen with soldiers who lost limbs in the line of duty because “it doesn’t look good for me.”

■ Kiggans supports the radical who spoke dismissively of the Medal of Honor — the highest possible award for military members — saying he’d rather receive the Medal of Freedom, a civilian award. His reason? Because Medal of Honor winners “oftentimes have suffered greatly, right? They’ve suffered greatly or they’re not around.”

On that last point, Trump could never conceive of suffering for any cause, much less making the ultimate sacrifice for his country. Let’s not forget that Trump dodged the draft with a nebulous diagnosis of bone spurs — and yet he has no trouble getting around an 18-hole golf course almost every day at the age of 78.

What’s astonishing is that Kiggans herself is a veteran, having served admirably as a Navy pilot, and yet she conveniently ignores all these things about the man she wants to be our commander in chief. What clear-thinking veteran would support a president who has said and done and believes all those awful things about our men and women who serve or have served?

For what it’s worth, all of these points above are from legitimate news sources and have been fact-checked thoroughly.

Missy Cotter Smasal, a Navy veteran who served aboard the USS Trenton during Operation Enduring Freedom, is the clear choice in this race for Congress — for veterans, for those currently serving, and for the rest of us.

the economy is laughable.

This is the guy who bankrupted his Trump Taj Mahal casino in Atlantic City, failed in his Trump University scam, had to close his Trump Foundation charity for incompetence and corruption, and is convicted for Trump Organization felony business practices.

He is hardly the leader we want to oversee our economic growth in the future.

Harris-Walz campaign signs are ‘tone deaf’

To the editor:

“Good Neighbors.” That’s the slogan on the Harris-Walz campaign signs appearing on lawns and along highways.

How tone deaf can a slogan be when the team running as “good neighbors” has totally abandoned our neighbors in North Carolina, western Virginia, Tennessee, and the other states devastated by Hurricane Helene.

Kamala Harris has been the vice president for over 3.5 years and totally owns the debacle that is being passed off as hurricane relief.

FEMA says it doesn’t have enough funds for the hurricane relief effort but somehow managed to spend over $1 billion to help illegal immigrants with cell phones, housing, debit cards, and airline flights.

Hurricane-devastated families are getting a measly $750 in federal aid after losing their homes, businesses, cars, and, in many cases, family members and friends.

Our strategic reserve of power grid components, such as transformers, has been depleted to rebuild the power grid in Ukraine. Our citizens will wait weeks or months to get full restoration of their power, but the lights are on in Kyiv.

Private relief efforts are being hampered by the likes of Transportation Secretary Pete Buttigieg, who has ordered private drones grounded — despite their being used to locate survivors and bodies. And deliveries of relief supplies from private sector organizations are subject to FEMA approval.

This is strike three for Kamala Harris’ leadership as a “good neighbor.” The devastating fire in Lahaina, Maui, was failure number one. The East Palestine, Ohio, train derailment was strike two. In both of these prior disasters our federal governments response, led by Joe Biden and Kamala Harris, has been pathetic. It took Biden over a year to go to East Palestine and Harris has never been.

Harris is not a “good neighbor.” She has shown consistent disdain for the plight of American citizens but has bent over backwards to flood American cities and towns with the flood of illegal immigrants that are costing American taxpayers over $450 billion a year to house and support.

Harris is unqualified to be President of the United States of America. She has failed as border czar, she has failed to connect one home or business to the internet in her role as administration point person for broadband access, and she has failed as vice president to help Americans recover from devastating fires, train derailments, and hurricanes.

She’s a failure — not a “good neighbor.”

Denise Bowden is best choice for mayor

To the editor:

I own a second home on Chincoteague Island and I split my time between there and my home in Pulaski.

I plan to retire in the near future and become a full-time resident of Chincoteague, so I stay current with issues and happenings on the island.

Over the years I have made many friends on the island, but none as close as Denise Bowden.

From the first time we met, she made me feel welcomed and at home. Over time we became friends and remain close.

I am asking you all to support her bid to be the next mayor of Chincoteague Island.

Denise lives, eats, and breathes Chincoteague Island. It’s in her blood. She never once lets her phone go to voice mail in order to answer the call from a concerned citizen.

It is the same with emails. There have been times when we traveled together and I’ve seen her answering emails while sitting under a palm tree or out on a boat excursion.

She won’t rest her mind until it is done. She takes her role that seriously and absolutely nothing will keep her from doing the job that she was elected to do on council.

The current mayor had stated for several years that he was not running for a third term, so it didn’t surprise me when Denise announced she was running for the position.

I’ve learned much about Denise over the last 20 years. She is a graduate of Chincoteague High School. Born and raised on the island, she is a 32-year full member of the fire company.

She is a blue-collar worker raised by a blue-collar family. Nothing has been handed to her. Hard work is afraid of her, not the other way around. She will conquer it if you put it in front of her. She is not one to back down from a challenge, or avoid an issue, no matter how difficult.

I work with her each year in the information stand at the carnival grounds during Pony Penning week. She barely gets to catch a breath before people are lined up to talk to her and it usually isn’t about carnival or ponies — it’s about Chincoteague Island.

Whether it is locals or the numerous visitors (she does not like the word “tourists;” they are guests in her eyes) that walk through those gates, she takes her time with each one and makes everyone feel important.

These things I mention are not meant to make her out to be perfect. They are meant to show you how much she truly loves Chincoteague and the roles that she has interacting with everyone who lives and visits the island and has questions or concerns.

I’ve learned this about Denise: If you say negative things about the fire company or the island, the ponies or the people, she will school you until you walk away with honest answers and a different outlook.

She pulls no punches and never sugarcoats things.

Some people don’t like that she is as outspoken as she is, but I say that is a great trait to have because you always know where you stand with her. However, she is also not afraid to admit if she is wrong or has made a mistake. She is as honest as the day is long. She wants to hear what people think and is willing to consider all sides of an issue.

I feel Denise is the clear choice to lead our island into some of the issues we face. As she says herself, she is dedicated and determined and I believe that these are two of the best qualities anyone could ask for from someone who will continue to work hard to see that our island becomes an even better place for all to live, work, and enjoy.

Trump is showing his age in may ways

To the editor:

Age matters. When you reach the late 70s in age, you know the changes in your mind and body. Others, too, notice them, even if they are polite about it.

Trump is now in his 79th year and the changes show in his lengthy speeches with repetition of old rants and increasingly false information.

Health issues are indicated in health records and though Trump reportedly had promised to release his medical records he now refuses to do so.

There is a parallel here. Remember that in the run up to the 2020 election he refused to provide his IRS tax returns, as presidential candidates traditionally have done. When finally examined in New York the records showed false evaluations on his real estate assets: They were valued higher when he needed collateral to obtain loans, lower when they would be taxed — hence his conviction for 32 felony counts in New York alone.

So if and when his health records are released, what may they reveal? Likely not good news or he would be willing to release them — and in one’s late 70s, medical records are rarely something to be proud of.

Hurricane Helene created massive destruction in five states — despite early steps taken by Biden, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, state governors, and efficient, coordinated physical and financial aid in its aftermath by federal and state agencies, all of which were commended by both Republican and Democratic governors of affected states.

Hurricanes are considered natural events, but scientific evidence assures us that we, mankind, must bear responsibility for their increasing frequency, ferocity, and related changes like the year-round higher water here in coastal Virginia.

These difficult and undeniable problems require dedicated leadership and very competent staff at all levels — like that demonstrated in the run-up and aftermath to Helene.

Now compare the federal response to Helene to the response to the Jan. 6 insurrection by our then commander-in-chief.

Trump himself created the insurrection by inciting hundreds of his loyal followers to storm the U.S. Capitol in order to prevent confirmation of the thoroughly validated election of Joe Biden.

Then, once the riot was in full swing with senators and congressmen sheltering inside for their lives, Trump had the power and authority to call a halt to it.

Instead he remained in the White House and for hours did nothing to quell the violence even when urged to do so by his advisors and his own family.

Records recently revealed say that when told that his own VP Mike

Pence was in grave danger, Trump said, "So what?"

When it was all over, Trump blamed others for failing to stop it. Can we truly trust such a person to be our commander in chief?

We on the Eastern Shore have been lucky so far with the hurricanes and have been spared many of the problems of more densely populated areas.

We can be thankful for our Latino heritage population who are community leaders, professionals, work in our fields, and also provide great high school soccer players.

But we should take note of some well-documented facts: Nationwide, over the past 4 years during the Biden/Harris administration, crime is down, the number of asylum seekers is down, new jobs are way up, inflation is down and so are some prices — gasoline and lumber among them.

Honest, experienced, dedicated federal leadership is critical here but mostly it is the result of millions of people working hard and taking risks hoping to better their lives and those of others.

Those in Venezuela and much of Latin America, Ukraine, most of Africa, and the Middle East are not so fortunate.

Nor does the U.S., whoever is president, have the power to effect immediate change there. We can only try and do what is possible.

On Monday, Oct. 7, "60 Minutes" was to conduct the customary back-to-back interviews with the two presidential candidates. Harris did her interview.

Trump backed out and did not appear but took the time to blast Harris's interview performance on his Truth Social.

Karen Buist

Mrs. Karen Elise Buist, 64, of Onancock, passed away at Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital in Onley, on Thursday, Sept. 19, 2024.

She was welcomed home to heaven by her Lord and Savior. Karen was the daughter of the late Bertil and Majorie Lindback, of Michigan.

Mrs. Buist

Karen graduated from Big Rapids High School, Big Rapids, Mich., where she met Kevin, who would be the love of her life. They were married on Sept. 18, 1982, in Big Rapids. They were married 42 years.

Together, due to work, they would travel the country, moving 12 times in 14 years, before coming to Virginia's Eastern Shore in 1996. They made their home in Onancock. Together, they raised their children on the Shore and developed many lasting relationships.

Growing up in Michigan, Karen was a competitive swimmer and a cheerleader throughout her youth and high school years. She continued to grow these awesome talents and characteristics through the years and her whole life. Wherever she lived, she reached out and worked as an aquatic specialist, working at community centers, state parks, schools, YMCAs, and the Eastern Shore Yacht and Country Club.

Karen was a positive, encouraging force. Over the years, she taught well over 1,000 people of all ages (mostly children) how to swim and how to improve their strokes, and she mentored them on building and developing their goals for improvement and success. While doing so, she was always an awesome cheerleader for those she taught, showing the love of Christ and setting a positive example for those she taught.

Through the years of her children's competitive careers, she would travel all over supporting them and the other children participating in the sport. She would volunteer to help wherever she could.

Abbot Mister

Mrs. Abbot Ann Ayres Mister, 90, wife of the late Sylvester Marshall “S.M.” Mister and resident of Melfa, passed away Monday, Oct. 7, 2024, at Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital in

Mrs. Mister

Onancock. Born Nov. 11, 1933, in Southside Chesconnessex and raised in Onancock, she was the daughter of the late Charlie G. Ayres and the late Bertha Marsh Ayres.

Abbot graduated from Onancock High School, class of 1952, married the love of her life, with whom she spent years, along with their children, relocating throughout the world during S.M.’s military career. Upon returning home to the Shore, Abbot worked for the former Coffman-Fisher Department Store and later for Peebles Department Store. She was a longtime member of Melfa United Methodist Church and loved reading, gardening, and music.

Many may not have realized how incredibly strong of a woman Abbot Mister was. As the wife of a U.S. Army soldier, she spent much of her adult life relocating their family from base to base. Over the years, she seamlessly transformed each new apartment or house into a home, although home was always wherever “mom” was. Abbot suffered the anguish of losing two sons, and despite her pain she remained compassionate and loving throughout her life. Her grandchildren, great-grandchildren, great-great-grandchildren, and her cat, Sassy, brought her much joy in her later years. She was very much loved and will be deeply missed.

She leaves to cherish her memory her daughter, Claudia Mister Kromer and her husband, Willie, of Onancock; sister, Charlotte Lewis, of Onancock; granddaughters, Bobbi Jo Evans and her husband, Charlie, of Melfa, and Stephanie Hill and her husband, James, of North Carolina; and several great-grandchildren, great-great grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

As deer mating season starts, drivers should be alert

As the days get shorter, the temperatures drop, and the leaves change color, the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) and Department of Wildlife Resources (DWR) are reminding motorists that autumn is accompanied by deer mating season. Drivers should slow down and use caution as deer are more active and the potential for crashes increases.

Deer are especially active in the fall — particularly from mid-October through November — during their mating season. Deer often cross roads and highways everywhere in Virginia at all times of the day but particularly at dawn and dusk.

With the change in seasons and the end of Daylight Saving Time approaching, the shorter days mean deer are on the move during peak travel times and more motorists are driving in the dark. Drivers should use caution everywhere, but especially near forested areas, along streams, and in locations where deer crossing signs have been installed, as these areas have been identified as particularly high deer traffic areas.

Last year, 42% of the crashes involving deer in Virginia happened in October and November, according to the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles. Of the 7,335 total crashes involving deer reported to law enforcement, there were 690 reported injuries. Virginia has seen an increase in crashes involving deer in recent years, with a 20% increase between 2022 and 2023.

Greer catches and releases 32-inch speck

The speckled trout fishery continues to improve with the falling water temperatures.

Bill Hall

One recently reported catch stands out above the others — Drake Greer, of Parksley, landed a 32-inch speckled trout, one of the largest speckles reported in several decades.

After measuring and a couple of photographs, the huge fish was tagged and released. Greer was fishing with Logan Godwin and his father, Wayne, when he made the memorable catch.

Upper Shore

Captain C.L. Marshall, of Tanger Sound Charters, reported that red drum measuring up to 50 inches have been caught and released over deep water structures in the Upper Pocomoke Sound.

Large bluefish, some weighing up to 10 pounds, and red drum have been hitting top water Rapalas.

The shallow waters around Bloodsworth Island have been producing catches of striped bass and red drum. Bottom fishermen using bloodworms for bait have found a mixed bag, including kingfish (whiting), croaker, and spot.

Marshall expects to see an increase in the number of gray trout over the shell piles and oyster rocks with the falling water temperatures.

Drake Greer caught, tagged, and released this 32-inch speckled trout in the Chesapeake Bay.

Chincoteague

The Assateague Island surf continues to produce catches of red drum, with fish measuring from slot-sized puppies to one nice 52-inch trophy-sized red. The 52-inch fish was caught and released by Derrick Stains. Stains released another red measuring 34 inches on the same day. Gary Bianco registered a 48-inch red drum release.

Flounder catches have been reported from the town dock, the Curtis Merritt Marina, and inside Chincoteague Bay. Live minnows or silversides with Berkley Gulp Swimming Mullet have been effective flounder baits.

Sheepshead catches have also come from inside Chincoteague Bay, and catches of small speckled trout and striped bass have been made in the back marshes. Recent offshore catches have included dolphin (mahi mahi), yellowfin tuna, and a nice-sized swordfish.

Wachapreague

Captain Lindsay Paul, aboard the Almost Persuaded, said that the flounder fishing out of Wachapreague continues to be “fairly decent,” with the best action occurring during the flood tide through the first of the ebb. Most fish have been taken on Berkley Gulps with a live minnow or silverside.

Puppy drum have shown up in the creeks all the way out to the inlet, with limit catches coming from cut bait as well as from casting artificial lures.

Black sea bass are on the ocean wrecks. Captain Paul commented that we finally had a decent weekend for fishing offshore. The White Bite went three-for-five on white marlin while boating 14 dolphin (mahi mahi) in the Norfolk Canyon. The Heat Wave had two bluefin tuna at the lumpy bottom and the Teaser landed a limit of mahi mahi.

Lower Shore

Tyler Nestor, at Oceans East — Eastern Shore, described the recent flounder action as “being on fire” at Wise Point, around the concrete ships, and in the waters off Kiptopeke. He recommended using jigs with Berkley

Gulp Grub trailers and squid strips.

He said that the speckled trout bite continues to get "better and better," with trout being caught off Kiptopeke as well as inside the bayside and seaside creeks. Paul Browns and Mirrolures have been effective trout lures.

The sheepshead bite continues on jigs baited with fiddler crabs or sand fleas at the concrete ships and around the pilings of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel.

Tautog have begun to show up in the same areas as the sheepsheads, and their numbers will improve as the water temperatures fall. Chunks of crab fished on jigs or high/low rigs are effective setups for the togs.

Trophy-sized red drum catches are still coming from around the islands of the bridge-tunnel on peeler and hard crab baits.

Jeb Brady, at Bailey's Bait & Tackle, told me that the lower bayside speckled trout fishery has been excellent over the last week. He added that anglers have reported a nice-sized class of fish, as the shop has weighed a half dozen or more fish weighing over five pounds in just the last 10 days.

He said the trout fishing should continue to improve with the cooling water temps and recommended using topwater and sinking Mirrolures or live baits when targeting the trophy specks.

Schools of puppy drum are still cruising the shallows along the lower bayside beaches and seaside marshes. Anglers are using light jigs with Berkley Gulp suspended under popping corks for targeting the puppies.

Anglers are still finding flounder along the bridge-tunnel, with catches of large sheepshead being reported along the bridge-tunnel as well. The lower bayside fishing piers are reporting catches of spot and ribbonfish.

Broadwater three-sport star: Surfing is her favorite

BY MARK MORING
Eastern Shore Post

During the school year, no matter the season, you're going to find Leah Smith wearing some kind of sports uniform at Broadwater Academy. Volleyball in the fall. Basketball in the winter. Track and field in the spring.

But in Smith's perfect world, she'd rather be catching waves at the beach.

"I love all the sports I play," says the versatile senior. "But above all, surfing is my favorite. If there was an option to do surfing as a sport, I might drop all the others."

"Surfing, for me, means peace. It's what comforts me."

California and Hawaii have high school surfing. Alas, there is no such thing on the Eastern Shore.

But that doesn't stop Smith and one of her best friends from getting up at 4 a.m. on summer days, taking the hour-long drive from Exmore to the beach at Assateague, and hitting the water.

"We like to get there at sunrise," Smith says. "We'll surf for a couple hours and then pass out on the beach. It's amazing."

Considering her love of the sea, it seems right that her school jerseys are emblazoned with the word "Vikings." She's totally at home on the water.

Smith doesn't have any awards to show for her surfing, but when it comes to high school sports, the list is long: All-conference and all-state volleyball as a junior. All-conference basketball as a sophomore and junior. All-state in multiple track and field events as a sophomore and junior; last year, she finished first in high jump, first in pole vault, third in discus, and fifth in the shot put at the state championships.

She comes from an athletic family. Her dad, Philip, scored almost 2,000 points for Broadwater in the early 1990s and went on to play college basketball. Her brother Levin is a

MEGAN AMES

6-foot-11 freshman on the Taylor University basketball team. And she says little sister Miranda, 14, might end up being the best athlete of them all.

This fall, Smith has led the Broadwater volleyball team to a 13-7 record, including 5-6 in the Metro Athletic Conference. The Vikings are ranked third in this week's Division IV state poll in the Virginia Independent Schools Athletic Association.

She leads the team in kills (132), service aces (58), and receptions (139). Though she's just 5-foot-8, she's a force at the net.

"Leah is our go-to hitter and our biggest offensive threat," says coach Heather Hall. "She's a team player who takes feedback from coaches well. She is kind and encourages the JV team to do their best. She will be a big missing link in the team next year."

What makes this team so good? "A lot of raw athletic talent," says Smith. She says that though the Vikings are currently in the middle of the pack in the Metro, she believes they're starting to peak.

Smith's academic record is just as impressive. She has a 4.23 GPA (taking mostly AP classes), is president of Beta Club (for honor students), and is on student council. She's especially strong in math and science.

Among other things, Smith is considering a college major in marine science — which puts her back in the water again, naturally. She took a college-level marine biology class at Broadwater last year, calling it "one of my favorite classes ever."

This year, she's in Honors Marine Science Seminar and has an internship at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science. Twice a week, she drives to Wachapreague, helping to collect data. "I've been sorting through algae," she says.

She's undecided whether she wants to keep playing sports in college, likely at the Division III level, or attend a major university and focus on academics.

"Hopefully, once I've applied to a variety of schools, it'll solidify my thoughts," Smith says. "I just really don't know yet. I'm still figuring out what is of great importance to me. I'm keeping my options open."

She hopes perhaps for some divine guidance in her college plans: "My faith is important to me," she says. "It's something you can always count on, something that's constant."

As constant as the seas and the tides, here's something else you can always count on: Come summer, Leah Smith will be right there, riding those breakers all the way in.

Northampton VA250 launches new historical driving tour

Northampton County has a new historical driving tour, bringing drivers from the Southern Gateway Welcome Center by the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel all the way to Willis Wharf.

The tour is a celebration of local Revolutionary War-era history and culture following the era’s themes of fierce independence, religious discord, political intrigue, protests, and privateering.

The United States’ Semiquincentennial, the 250th anniversary of the 1776 Declaration of Independence, is rapidly approaching in 2026.

Around the nation and the state, organizations are already gearing up for the special anniversary by developing exhibits, events, lectures, and more in celebration of America’s inception and independence.

Northampton County’s new tour is an exciting addition to these efforts. This well-rounded tour has 15 stops, each with audio guides, photographs, and primary sources that reveal the significance of these off-the-beaten-path locations.

A map view and driving directions guide users from one site to the next. Along the way, there is information about things to do and places to eat in between historic sites.

Stops include notable places like Pear Valley, Arlington Plantation, and the Eastville Courthouse Green, each with its own unique story.

For example, the last stop on the tour, in Willis Wharf, delves into the occupation of Hog Island by the British at the beginning of the Revolutionary War.

Small ships snuck onto the mainland during the night to steal supplies, even going so far as to take entire poultry flocks while they rested in their coops.

In February 1783, six months before the end of the war, the Virginia militia attacked the British forces on Hog Island, ultimately ending its British occupation.

The tour can be accessed through the Shore History App or through any browser.

You can access the app by searching “Shore History” in the App Store or Google Play Store or by going to shorehistory.org and clicking “Visit” and then selecting “The Shore History App.”

You can also visit co.northampton.va.us and search “Northampton250” in the top search bar.

The Northampton VA250 Local Commission spearheaded the development of this self-guided tour with funding from the Northampton County Tourism Fund and the Virginia250 Grant Program administered by the Virginia Tourism Corporation.

Collaborators included Will Russell, Bill Nelson, Shore History, and the Eastern Shore of Virginia Tourism Commission.

Volunteers needed to help document King Tide flooding

The King Tide is coming and Wetlands Watch is seeking volunteers to help document the flooding.

“Catch the King” is an annual tide mapping event that recruits volun-

This year’s King Tide dates are Thursday, Oct. 17, through Sunday, Oct. 20.

Citizen scientists will use the Sea Level Rise app to document flooding.

Funding allocated for first responder wellness efforts

Governor Glenn Youngkin has issued Executive Order 38, which directs the Secretary of Public Safety and Homeland Security to establish an Office of First Responder Wellness at the Department of Criminal Justice Services to support the emotional, physical, and overall personal wellness of first responders in the commonwealth.

Given the significant cumulative effect of critical incidents involving tragedy and human suffering that first responders experience daily, more resources must be dedicated to supporting their mental and physical well-being, Youngkin said.

“Hurricane Helene’s tragic devastation of Southwest Virginia reminds us that our first responders are always our frontline heroes that are there to rescue and aid Virginians in need. We must support them better,” Youngkin said. “The data clearly shows that repeated traumatic events experienced by first responders take a toll on the human body, mind, and soul. The coordination and partnerships at the local, state, and federal level, along with the private sector, will provide much better support and results for our first responder heroes.”

The executive order formalizes the existing Office of First Responder Wellness at the Department of Criminal Justice Services, directing it to provide training and support for mental and physical health of first responders. It creates a new Chief Coordinating Officer role under the Secretary of Public Safety and Homeland Security, directing the person to convene a work group of key state agencies, local first responder leaders, mental health professionals, clergy, and family members to advise on first responder wellness efforts.

Youngkin has approved a request from the Department of Criminal Justice Services to allocate $3 million in unexpended fiscal year 2024 balances to the Office of First Responder Wellness to offer grants for nonprofits and local agencies supporting first responder wellness efforts.

The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration estimates that 30% of first responders develop behavioral health conditions. Additionally, recent studies indicate that first responders are suffering from PTSD, depression, and anxiety due to work-related stressors at a rate considerably above the national average.

The divorce rate for first responders is 15 to 25% higher than the general population and 10% of first responders report having thoughts of suicide.

Buildings, real estate taxes on town radar

BY STEFANIE JACKSON BOWMANN
Eastern Shore Post

Northampton supervisors in September unanimously voted to give Nassawadox a waiver of up to $4,000 in disposal fees related to the demolition of a derelict building in the town.

Northampton County Administrator Charlie Kolakowski said he advised the town to recycle as much of the metal, brick, and concrete as possible before disposing of the demolition debris.

Supervisor John Coker asked if there is a way for the county to recover any of the cost of the demolition from the property owner. Kolakowski said that process will be worked out with the town.

He recommended offering disposal fee waivers to any of Northampton

County’s incorporated towns, including Exmore, Eastville, Cheriton, and Cape Charles.

Kolakowski also asked supervisors to consider paying for future demolitions and disposal fees with county revitalization funds.

“I think a derelict house in the middle of a nice neighborhood or a neighborhood that can be revitalized is a bad thing, and so, removing that, even if it’s at public expense, is a good thing,” he said.

The Nassawadox Town Council recently amended its ordinance on the demolition of derelict buildings, according to the September 2024 edition of the town’s official newsletter.

The ordinance now includes “unsafe structures” so that Northampton County can condemn them, allowing demolition to proceed.

Other recent happenings in Nassawadox include:

■ The Nassawadox Town Council in June took action to mitigate the impact of Northampton County’s recent real-estate reassessment, in which property values increased an average of about 25%.

The town council approved a reduction in Nassawadox’s real-estate tax rate, from 14 cents per $100 of assessed value to 11 cents per $100 of assessed value.

The new rate was implemented to save homeowners from higher real-estate tax bills.

■ The Nassawadox Town Council in July approved a zoning amendment to allow multifamily dwellings in certain areas, including the former location of Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital and surrounding vacant medical buildings.

There are no plans yet for multifamily homes in any of the approved areas.

The clearing of the former hospital property is nearing completion. It is unknown when the property will be sold.

Riverside Medical Group is a non-profit organization, so the property must be sold at fair market value.

■ Nassawadox is seeking write-in candidates for election to two-year terms on the town council. There are only three candidates on the ballot for the six-member council.

Marianne DeAngelo and Claude Jones are running write-in campaigns, but additional candidates are desired to ensure all seats on the town council are filled.

Mayor Patsy Stith is seeking reelection but is planning to retire at the end of the next two-year term.

The Nassawadox Town Council meets for approximately one hour on the fourth Monday of every month, except sometimes it does not meet in December.

The town council occasionally attends other meetings and public hearings throughout the year.

Council member: RFP issue ‘embarrassing’

BY JANET BERNOSKY
Eastern Shore Post

The Pocomoke City Council is taking steps to regroup and move forward with its Safe Paths Initiative after losing funds they hoped to earmark for the project.

A discussion on the matter was held at a work session following the regular Mayor and City Council meeting held on Monday, Oct. 7.

In September, the Worcester County Commissioners voted to take back unused grant funds from fiscal years 2023 and 2024, awarding them instead to a newly formed local nonprofit.

The work session opened with an apology from City Manager John Barkley, when the request for proposals he wrote in September for the initiative failed to yield a single bid from a contractor.

“We need to go back to the drawing board,” Barkley said, admitting his RFP lacked specificity.

Despite this, three contractors with potential interest in the project showed up for a pre-bid meeting scheduled by Barkley for Sept. 25. However, Barkley took off from work that day.

Council First Vice-President Monda Marsh and Bill East, director of public works, attempted to facilitate the meeting in Barkley’s absence.

Chastised indirectly by the contractors for the lack of specifics in Barkley’s RFP, they were told to seek exam-

New four-way stop

■ Pocomoke City residents and visitors should be aware of new four-way stop signs introduced at 2nd Street and Linden Avenue and the three-way stop at 4th Street and Linden. Residents are asked to proceed with caution through these intersections as drivers adjust.

ples from Salisbury and Snow Hill for similar projects to know how to proceed in the future.

“It was embarrassing,” said Marsh.

Mayor Todd J. Nock adamantly stated that the meeting should have been rescheduled and that Marsh and East should not have been put in that position.

Marsh praised East for his efforts to work with those who attended that day.

She also noted the enormity of the project and pointed out the need to address new funding sources before moving forward.

Marsh pointed out that the city missed two grant deadlines, including one in August, that would have been appropriate for the initiative.

Given the scope of the project, the mayor and council admitted they needed some additional help to prioritize specific projects within the initiative to proceed further at this point.

Early on, each council member submitted a list of infrastructure concerns within their district for consideration.

Marsh said East suggested to focus on sidewalks before proceeding with road repairs. Roadwork also isn’t feasible in upcoming colder weather.

Council member C.L. Marshall suggested a good starting point would be to focus on installing new sidewalks on Cedar Street on the school side of Pocomoke High School.

This is a project that could be an easily accomplished first step, he added, and bring a sense of satisfaction to the council and the community.

Council member Scott Holland said that he was amenable to potentially hiring an engineering firm for advice.

Earlier in the work session, Barkley suggested hiring an engineer or contractor to oversee the entire project.

In the end, Nock suggested a discussion with a contracting firm they are currently working with for advice on how to proceed.

Mayor at White House

Nock said he was honored to participate in a meeting at the White House on Oct. 3 about the future expansion at NASA and the Wallops Flight Facility, adding that Pocomoke needs to move on housing and office space options for contractors coming to the area.

‘Bottle bill’ discussion

Two members from the lower Eastern Shore group of the Maryland Chapter of the Sierra Club, Jacky Grindrod and Cindy Dillon, spoke about the need for a so-called “bottle bill” in Maryland, which would involve adding a small fee to beverage containers, refundable when they are returned for recycling.

Information they shared claimed only 23% of the approximately 5.5 billion beverage containers sold yearly in Maryland are recycled. The rest end up in landfills, roadsides, or waterways.

By offering monetary incentives for the return of metal, glass, or plastic beverage containers, it’s anticipated that more would be offered for recycling with fewer ending up as environmental threats.

Items would be returned to “reverse vending machines,” with deposits paid back to individuals who feed the machines, with a 90% redemption rate as a goal.

The program would be funded largely by the beverage producers.

A bottle bill is currently up for consideration with the 2025 Maryland General Assembly, Grindrod said.

Currently, just 10 states in the country have bottle bills.

The two mayoral candidates are incumbent J. Arthur Leonard and town council member Denise Bowden. The four town council candidates seeking three seats are William “Billy” McComb, Gene Wayne Taylor, Sonia Watson-Conser, and Nick Howard.

Fearless Caregiver Conference: ‘You are not alone’

BY JANET BERNOSKY
Eastern Shore Post

Riverside’s Martha W. Goodson Center, located in Williamsburg, in conjunction with Today’s Caregiver Magazine, hosted the Fearless Caregiver Conference held at Eastern Shore Community College on Sept. 26.

Other corporate sponsors included Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital, ESCC, and the Riverside Health Foundation.

The daylong conference featured morning and afternoon panel discussions with local and state experts in caregiving or related fields, sharing knowledge, answering questions, and engaging in conversation with an audience largely comprised of individual caregivers.

The panel discussions were facilitated by Steven Craig Barg, CEO and publisher of Today’s Caregiver magazine. He and his late brother, Gary Barg, found themselves being caregivers to their father and grandparents almost 30 years ago, and eventually turned caregiving into a business.

They launched the first Fearless Caregiver Conference in 1998. To those attending, Barg delivered a message: “You are not alone. It’s our goal to empower, educate, and support you with local resources.”

Many people find themselves in a caregiving role at some point in life, perhaps after they have raised their own children.

It might involve one or both parents, another family member, or even a friend facing a health crisis or a life-changing event, such as a job loss or a personal tragedy.

Typically, though, people do associate caregiving as involving someone older, with Alzheimer’s Disease or dementia, a chronic condition that affects someone’s independence, or a terminal disease like cancer.

It might, however, also involve parents caring for a child with a significant developmental or physical disability. Needs change as that child becomes an adult and the parents themselves age. What happens when the parents die?

Panelist Donna Smith, executive director of the Eastern Shore Area Agency on Aging, said sometimes caregiving might involve a multigenerational family unit relying on each other, with an older member caring for the young children of working parents, all living together or nearby.

The focus of the conference was on empowerment, defining the fearless caregiver as someone who understands they are an important member of someone’s care team, “no less important than the case manager, therapist, or even the doctor.”

The fearless caregiver is also someone who is connected with local agencies and support groups designed to help them and the people under their care because they realize they can’t do it alone.

They ask questions and don’t readily take “no” for an answer.

Fearless caregivers also advocate for themselves, realizing they, too, have jobs, families, and other duties requiring time and energy.

They also understand the need to take time for self-care, spiritual needs, personal growth, or leisure activities because caregiving is hard and quite stressful, and we, ourselves, need to recharge.

However, caregivers sometimes don’t ask for help, or the person they are caring for refuses outside help.

The reality is that caregivers might lose their job because they’ve taken too much time off transporting their loved ones to appointments or tending to last-minute, unexpected needs.

They don’t question others “in charge” because they feel their opinions don’t matter, even when they doubt what experts are saying.

They might spread themselves too thinly, still trying to be all things to all people, while not addressing their own needs.

Caregiver might neglect their own burgeoning health issues out of concern for someone else’s.

They may suddenly find themselves in what feels like a parenting role to their own parents.

Overall, caregivers have more stress in their lives than those they are caring for.

Over the next several weeks, the Post will individually focus on local and state agencies, plus support groups, many of whom participated in the conference.

In the spirit of educating, empowering, and supporting caregivers, as Steven Barg said, it is hoped that these subsequent articles will help caregivers who were unable to attend the conference to connect with resources on the Eastern Shore and beyond so that they, too, will become fearless caregivers.

Lecture on Eyre Hall to be held Oct. 20

The Northampton Historic Preservation Society is hosting a Lecture on the Lawn at Eyre Hall at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 20. The lecture will be given by David Scott. Situated on Cherrystone Creek, Eyre Hall has been standing tall since 1759. Come by and learn about the history of this elegant mansion, its architecture, and the story of the Eyre family. Where did the Eyre family come from? Did this property once belong to someone from the Lee family of Virginia? Was Severn Eyre Northampton County’s most notable patriot? How did Eyre Hall set the trend for Northampton County architecture in the late 1700s? How is the Eyre family connected to other notable families of Northampton County and Norfolk? How did William Littleton Eyre end up in the debtors’ prison? Learn all of this and more. No fees are charged for this lecture, but attendees are asked to consider a $10 donation to support the completion of the 1907 jail museum project. Be sure to bring a lawn chair and dress comfortably. For weather-related announcements, check the Northampton Historic Preservation Society website at <https://tinyurl.com/4z3x6a32>
