In Northampton, a housing dilemma

Officials cite housing density regulations as obstacle to affordability

Eastern Shore Post

The average value of newly constructed homes in Northampton County is $543,000 — not including the value of the land on which the homes were built.

In Northampton, 34% of renters and 23% of homeowners are cost-burdened, meaning those households have less money for food, child care, and transportation.

Although there were 157 new homes built in Northampton last year, much of the county's existing housing stock is aging out, said County Administrator Charlie Kolakowski — meaning there's no real gain in the number of homes.

The Northampton Board of Supervisors peeled back the layers of the county's housing problem during a January meeting.

The obstacles were numerous, but the standout issue conveyed by a developer and several elected and appointed officials was housing density.

These same stakeholders say the county's zoning regulations, particularly on housing density, prevent developers from using creative strategies to build attainable workforce housing.

"The issue is not a simple one," said Supervisor Dixon Leatherbury, who called

Refurbished rail car highlights planned welcome center

BY JIM RITCH

Eastern Shore Post

The day before Christmas Eve in 2018, Cape Charles town council member Tammy Holloway received an anxious phone call.

“Did you know they’re taking the trains away?” asked a friend.

Two privately owned passenger cars were being moved off the former rail yard at Cape Charles’ core. With them a rusting, former heavyweight passenger car painted in the light and dark blues of the all-but-defunct Bay Coast Railroad was also slated to move.

Crews were ready to cut and remove rails so that the cars could never return.

Holloway, then president of Cape Charles Main Street and current co-owner of the Bay Haven Inn, felt that future visitors needed to see and experience the railroad that had brought Cape Charles to life.

In losing the heavyweight car, the town would lose an important key-stone of its heritage.

A quick series of phone calls ensued with John Coker of the Northampton County Board of Supervisors and fellow supervisor Spencer Murray, who doubled as an officer of Canonie Atlantic Co., which owned the rail car.

In short order, a gift resulted and the car was left on a siding alongside Strawberry Street Plaza.

Seven years and more than $160,000 later, Cape Charles Main Street completed refurbishing the car and now celebrates it as centerpiece ready to be paired with a planned tourism welcome center.

Painted silhouettes of camera-toting and guitar strumming tourists fill the windows.

A rear platform where visitors may pose as though waving from a tail-end presidential campaign car replaces one of the original vestibules.

The car’s maroon color is authentic and the car, watertight and eye-appealing, sits on a heavy-duty, gravel track bed to support its tens of tons of weight.

That gravel foundation alone cost about $25,000, said Coker, and was for him one of the major surprises in the project.

Now being written are interpretive panels that will surround the car, said Holloway.

Getting to this point required some unexpected twists after asbestos had to be removed and workers had to wrap the badly rusted lower edge of the body with fresh metal.

While future tourists will enjoy the car, past tourists paid for its refurbishing.

Most of the funding came from taxes on tourist lodging, also known as transient occupancy tax, a 6% levy shared by the town and county.

Another 6% percent share goes to the state.

Northampton dipped into its share to donate about $125,000 to the project. Cape Charles donated in-kind services.

The remaining funds came through other grants, said Holloway.

The original concept was for the car to house displays, a small theater area, and an office for Cape Charles Main Street, but those have been incorporated into plans for the adjoining visitors center.

The switch came after volunteers learned of the cost to provide handicapped access, electrical connections and plumbing, said Holloway.

Land for the visitors center has been leased to the town from Canonie, said Murray, now president of Canonie Atlantic Co.

Education foundation oyster roast benefits schools, students

BY TED SHOCKLEY
Eastern Shore Post

A nonprofit group founded 19 years ago to provide Northampton County Public Schools with extra funding and educational support will hold an oyster roast to raise money for its mission.

The Northampton County Education Foundation raised more than $95,000 for student and educational initiatives during the 2023-24 school year, according to its annual impact report.

"It's really grown in the last three years," said the foundation's communications chair, Lori McDonald.

"We're hoping to raise more money this year than we did last year," she said.

The group's largest fundraiser is its annual oyster roast, which will be held on Saturday, March 8, from 4 to 8 p.m., at The Shanty restaurant, 33 Marina Road, Cape Charles.

The menu includes oysters, clams, pork barbecue, sides, and two beverages. The event also features live music by Clara and Co. and a silent auction.

McDonald said Jon Dempster, owner of the restaurant, donates all the food and beverages and allows use of the restaurant space for free.

"Jon Dempster is an incredible champion of public education," said McDonald. "He's incredibly generous."

Tickets are $125 each and 300 will be sold. Visit www.nocoedfoundation.com for tickets.

Billie-Jean Bensen, the board chair of the foundation, said the all-volunteer group of board directors "works tirelessly throughout the year to promote, enrich, and provide needed support to our school system."

Examples include $3,850 to help fund the annual summer pre-kindergarten camp, which helped 27 families, according to the annual report.

The foundation donated $5,245 for clothing and hygiene products for Kids Closet, which offers the items for free to students.

The foundation awarded a $12,961 grant to help offset the cost of choral stage risers for Northampton high and middle school students.

Another project is Shore Mentors, which recruits, screens, trains, and supports volunteers to work with students and educators.

The foundation supported teachers with $4,500 for events including the new teacher orientation luncheon, school supplies, staff appreciation initiatives, and support for professional development.

The foundation also donated $2,000 to help fund the school system's Excellence in Education event, which celebrated the dedication and loyalty of teachers and staff.

Route 13 (Lankford Highway) Median Crossovers Project Northampton County

Find out about proposed plans to eliminate or modify five existing median crossovers and to add a new median crossover left-turn lane on Route 13 (Lankford Highway) in Northampton County. Within the project limits, extending from 0.06 miles north of Capeville Drive to 0.03 miles north of Arlington Road/Custis Tomb Road on Route 13 in Cape Charles, the proposed plans include closing three median crossover openings, extending two existing median crossover left-turn lanes on Route 13 north, and adding a new median crossover left-turn lane for Route 13 south near the intersection at Sawmill Lane. The project is designed to improve overall safety concerns at this location and to accommodate the future traffic needs of Northampton County as identified in the Route 13/Wallops Island Access Management Study, STARS Route 13 (Lankford Highway) Corridor Improvement Study, and the Eastern Shore Safety Study.

Housing

the current zoning ordinance “burdensomely complex.”

In addition, some are concerned that development may impact open space and detract from the county’s character.

Supervisor Betsy Mapp said that whatever zoning changes are made, Northampton will need regulations that preserve open space, otherwise the county will have “wall-to-wall people, and there goes our great outdoors.”

For now, the housing problem on the Eastern Shore is twofold: there are too few available homes, and the few available options are too expensive for many potential buyers or renters.

Supervisor John Coker said developers are not building affordable housing anymore, and most new homes cost over $400,000.

He said Northampton County needs more homes in the $250,000 range that can be purchased for $1,500 to $2,000 a month.

“What we have isn’t working for getting us more housing,” he said.

Strategies in place

Eric Luchansky, director of housing development for the Accomack-Northampton Planning District Commission, said the strategy his organization is using to make homes more affordable is to sell each house with a portion of the total cost on a second deed of trust or loan.

For example, A-NPDC sold a one-bedroom home on Occohannock Neck Road in Exmore for $165,000 plus $42,000 on a second deed of trust, which is essentially an interest-free loan for as long as the owner lives in the home.

Chesapeake-based Virginia Builders is permitted to build 27 homes in a subdivision off Cheriton Cross Road. Instead of building 27 more expensive, single-family homes, the contractor is willing to build 27 duplexes — 54 less-expensive housing units — that will be easier to afford for middle-income families.

Ashley Thornes, Virginia Department of Health master alternative onsite soil evaluator, said the health department is onboard with permitting the installation of shared septic systems for duplexes.

A duplex with two or three bedrooms per unit, or four to six bedrooms total, could share one septic system, Thornes said.

Northampton’s comprehensive plan favors the construction of new housing in and around towns with public sewer systems, but because the expansion of sewer service is realistically 30 or 40 years out, the immediate focus must be on areas that can support homes with private septic systems, Kolakowski said.

But there are other hurdles to jump, the highest one being Northampton County amending its zoning ordinance to allow double housing density in some areas.

The duplexes would require increasing housing density from one to two homes per 20,000 square feet of land, or approximately a half-acre.

There was a consensus at the work session that increased housing density should be restricted to an area with subdivisions that are two or three miles from an incorporated town.

In addition to considering higher housing density, Northampton supervisors also must decide whether or not to provide extensions for planned subdivisions that have not been built and will expire in July.

Housing options for low-income families also are being considered, including mobile home parks, which are supported in Northampton’s comprehensive plan.

Renting a mobile home is also a good option for a first home or temporary housing for someone who is starting a career but isn’t planning to reside on the Shore permanently, supervisors said.

However, many of Northampton’s existing mobile home parks do not conform to the current regulations, so when the units reach the end of their lifespan and are not replaced, that housing stock is lost.

Furthermore, Northampton’s zoning ordinance is not conducive to the construction of new mobile home parks due to the “excessive” regulations, Kolakowski said.

For example, a new mobile home park may have only two units per acre, compared to the six or eight units per acre in many existing mobile home parks in Northampton County.

A new mobile home park also requires a setback of 300 feet from U.S. Route 13 and 200 feet from other public access roads, and it must be screened from view by vegetation 25 feet deep.

Other options

Options for a low-income household to purchase a home include Habitat for Humanity, which has an Eastern Shore branch.

A homebuyer who qualified for assistance from Habitat for Humanity traditionally worked alongside volunteers to build the dwelling and got a zero-interest home loan.

Eastern Shore of Virginia Habitat for Humanity is working to make its homes even more affordable by opting for modular homes instead of traditional stick-built construction.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture Rural Development also offers home loan programs with no credit score requirement, no down payment, and low interest rates.

But Kolakowski cautioned that government home loans aren’t the ideal solution for every person seeking housing.

“They set the income limits so low, they put people in a house that they own, but they can’t afford to maintain it,” he said.

Renters doing their part to properly maintain homes is also key to housing attainability, supervisors said.

Supervisor Oliver Bennett pointed out that a landlord will hesitate to rent to someone who has a reputation for damaging or destroying properties, and the cost to repair the properties drives up rental prices.

He would like to see the creation of a home caretaking course for renters, similar to the free course for first-time homebuyers that is offered through the A-NPDC.

Glen Anders, a member of the Northampton planning commission, noted that he and his colleagues have been spending a lot of time on regulations for short-term vacation rental homes, not on permanent housing.

He spoke cautiously of the housing density issue and imagined “people coming out of the woodwork” to address the “sticky topic.”

Coker said the county needs “to come up with some different ways to look at ... lot size to get more housing.”

“I would agree with that 100%,” Anders said.

SERVING VIRGINIA'S EASTERN SHORE

THE PAPER'S POSITION

Admission of a wrong is exactly the right move

A remarkable admission happened last week that should not go unnoticed. A person in charge publically admitted he was wrong.

It was the interim Accomack County school superintendent, David Jeck. The school system was criticized for not dismissing school earlier on Tuesday, Feb. 11, as snow fell throughout the afternoon.

"The snow came earlier and heavier than we had expected," Jeck said in an email.

"It was my call. I made the wrong one. I will do better next time."

His admission was refreshing and thoughtful. It was a lesson from which we can all learn.

Don't get us wrong: The Eastern Shore is well-served by its government entities, big and small.

Leading those agencies, towns, departments, offices, school systems, and counties is a cadre of professional public administrators whose competence and diligence is an asset to our communities.

We feel, by and large, they get things right. Thank goodness they do.

But people in charge — business leaders, elected officials, public servants, even newspaper editors — don't like to admit when they are wrong.

Sometimes, when faced with the repercussions from a decision that backfires, folks in charge will defend their moves and motives, keep digging a hole best filled in, and obfuscate people instead of enlightening them.

We all make mistakes — even school superintendents. Admitting our mistakes and promising to learn from them is always good form — even for school superintendents.

'Ag Superhero' candidates sought

A new roster of Virginia's agricultural icons will be immortalized on collectible trading cards at this year's State Fair of Virginia.

For the third year, the public is invited to nominate Virginians working in various agriculture and natural resources professions to appear on the 2025 Ag Superhero Trading Cards.

Twelve ag superheroes selected by a committee will be pictured with their industry-related statistics. Visitors can collect the free cards during the State Fair, which will run from Sept. 26 through Oct. 5.

During the State Fair Educational Expo, the trading cards will be distributed to teachers as educational resources, along with related lesson plans and activities.

From livestock farmers to crop researchers and rural healthcare providers, the face of Virginia's largest private industry is diverse, said Sarah Jane Thomsen, manager of agriculture education and strategic programming partnerships for the State Fair.

"Producing the world's food and fiber may be an unsung feat at times," she noted. "The trading cards are a celebration of their efforts and impact, including those superheroes working

County, town are closer to resource officer deal

BY JANET BERNOSKY

Eastern Shore Post

The town of Chincoteague moved one step closer to receiving county funding for the salary of its high school resource officers after grant funds run out at the end of this academic year.

That possibility was first up for discussion when the Accomack County Board of Supervisors met in a special session on Feb. 5 to discuss the next fiscal year budget and representatives from Chincoteague presented their request.

Town officials said they would be willing to fund the remaining portion of the salary, along with the other related expenses, if the county would agree to fund approximately $63,000 toward the academic year portion.

Supervisor Robert Crockett took issue with this, saying, "Once you take over the program, you take over the program."

While he was the county's sheriff, he said he had to decide how to fund positions once a grant closed — a situation now faced by the town of Chincoteague.

However, at the follow-up budget meeting held on Feb. 13, Crockett appeared to have changed his mind.

He proposed raising the county's cigarette tax an additional 10 cents, from 30 to 40 cents per pack.

Along with this additional revenue from the 10-cent increase, Sheriff Todd Wessells agreed to withdraw his request for a new animal control officer, at a salary and benefits package of approximately $73,000.

Together, these two moves could be used to fund the four county school resource officers plus Chincoteague's high school position.

It was already proposed to bump the cigarette tax from 20 to 30 cents per pack.

The supervisors also plan to discuss funds for additional SROs with school division officials as part of their budget hearing, to possibly include officers at the elementary level.

At Chincoteague's presentation, Mayor Denise Bowden set forth this challenge to the supervisors.

Crockett said if the board did nothing to increase these numbers and protect students, and if faced with an active shooter situation at some point, the public would be right to call the supervisors into question.

Eastern Shore Post

She may be ‘sweet,’ but she’ll wrap you up

BY MARK MORING

Eastern Shore Post

When Dulce Perez-Vicente’s parents moved to the U.S. from Guatemala more than two decades ago, there’s no way they could have known that their first child, who would be born a few years later, would someday become one of the Shore’s best female wrestlers.

“They’ve told me they moved here for freedom, independence, and a world that was filled with new opportunities,” says Perez-Vicente, a Nandua senior headed to the girls state wrestling championships next week in Glen Allen.

Who knew that one of those opportunities would be for their daughter to blaze trails and pave the way for other girls in the growing Warrior program.

Perez-Vicente, one of more than a dozen girls on the Nandua team, is the school’s only girl to qualify for states this year.

She got here the hard way. Competing in the 132-pound division, Perez-Vicente lost her first-round match at regionals, putting her on the brink of elimination. But she bounced back to win six straight matches to qualify for states.

Five of those six wins came via her signature move, one that Warrior coach Nathan Metzger calls “The Dulce.” “She has an arsenal of moves,” says Metzger, “but that’s the one she falls back on.”

It clearly works. Perez-Vicente is 13-5 this year and 40-16 for her career, which began as a sophomore almost on a whim. She was a freshman when she heard Metzger mention the possibility of coming out for the team.

“In all honesty, I signed up as a joke,” she says. “I never intended to commit or even to do the sport.”

Perez-Vicente was already playing soccer at Nandua and probably would’ve stuck with it. But when she got into wrestling, she fell in love with the sport and eventually dropped soccer. Last year and this year, she has focused solely on the mats.

Most of the girls on Nandua’s team — and many of the boys — are of Hispanic heritage. Perez-Vicente says that didn’t really happen by design; it just kind of fell into place that way, as girls on the team started recruiting friends to come out.

“I’m proud that the majority of our wrestlers are Hispanics,” she says. “I think most Hispanics can say that our heritage includes hard work, and wrestling is a really hard sport.”

“There’s also the beauty of our culture sticking together, and I’ve seen that on our team, as we support each other, win or lose. Even at practices, we all push each other, which makes us a great team and more like a family.”

As co-captain of the girls team — along with fellow senior Iris Martinez-Chavez — one of Perez-Vicente’s roles is to lead. Metzger says she does so with quiet grace.

“She’s not the loudest member on the team,” he says. “She leads by example. She’s very caring and always has a smile. When a teammate is down, she’s the first one in their corner trying to console and pick the person up.”

“I think others would describe me as a nice and encouraging person,” Perez-Vicente says. “Maybe to some people a little talkative but easygoing.”

But she’s fierce on the mats, says Metzger. “She’s extremely tenacious and refuses to back down or give up.”

Perez-Vicente is the oldest of four children of Maynor Perez and Alicia Vicente, of Accomac. She has three younger brothers — Erik (13), Freyman (11), and Danny (5). Erik, an eighth grader, started wrestling this year, and Metzger is looking forward to having him on the high school squad next winter.

After graduation, Perez-Vicente says she’ll either go to college or join the military; she’s still undecided. But whichever path she chooses, she wants to pursue a career in dentistry.

For now, though, she’s laser-focused on the upcoming state meet, where her goal is to place in the top three.

“It’s exciting, nerve-wracking, and sad,” she says, knowing it’ll mark the end of her high school wrestling days. “Just a mix of emotions.”

And a world of opportunity.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

BA's Smith hits 1,000

Broadwater Academy senior Leah Smith scored her 1,000th career point last week, joining her father, Philip, a former Vikings star, in hitting that milestone. Smith said, "Ever since I was young, people always told me how great my dad was at basketball. He never gloated about his skills, but I've seen his film, so I know how good he really was! He has shown me that dedication and hard work will lead to achieving your goals. And like my dad, I've tried to remain humble, staying true to one of the greatest lessons he taught me."

Joining Smith for the celebration were her parents, Lori and Philip, and sister, Miranda, an eighth-grader on the team and a rising star.

Philip Smith scored almost 2,000 points at Broadwater, and Leah's older brother Levin, another former Viking standout, plays at Taylor University.

SWIMMING

17 Warriors state-bound

On Friday, Feb. 14, seniors Lucas Calvetti, Camden Lewis, Zach Smith, and Austin Wert led the Nandua boys swim team to the Region 2A championship, a final tuneup before Friday's state championships in Richmond.

Nandua has qualified 17 swimmers — nine girls and eight boys — for the state meet. Calvetti, Lewis, Smith, and Wert — who call themselves "The Squad" — won the boys 200 medley relay and 200 free relay at regionals to lead the way.

The foursome, who hold school records in all three relays (including the 400 free), "are a great addition to the team and will be missed next year," says coach KJ Bentley. "They bring a lot of fun and energy to practice, bus rides, and meets."

At regionals, Nandua's boys finished with 412 team points, to Poquoson's 296 and Bruton's 285. Nandua's girls, meanwhile, were just edged by Bruton for the top spot; Bruton tallied 448 points, Nandua 438, and Poquoson 245.

Other first-place regional finishers for Nandua's boys included Calvetti (200 free), Wert (100 free), and Lewis (500 free). Sarah Bentley picked up the lone first-place finish for Nandua's girls, winning the 100 breaststroke.

The Warrior girls who qualified for states are Maddy Askew (200 individual medley), Chloe Bacchi (200 free, 100 breast, 200 medley relay, and 200 free relay), Campbell Bays (400 free relay), Sarah Bentley (200 individual medley, 100 breast, 200 medley relay, and 200 free relay), Meya Charnock (200 free, 500 free, 200 medley relay, and 200 free relay), Emma Holt (400 free relay), Morgan Johnson (200 individual medley, 100 breast, and 400 free relay), Jordan Penland (400 free relay), and Lexi-Mae Thornes (50 free, 100 free, 200 medley relay, and 200 free relay).

Coach Bentley said she hopes everyone makes the top 16 in the morning preliminaries at the state meet, thus qualifying for the finals that night.

"It would be great for both teams to place in the top five," she said.

Foodbank receives $100k grant

The Foodbank of Southeastern Virginia and the Eastern Shore received a $100,000 Community Development Block Grant for a services expansion project in Accomack County.

More than $23.6 million in Community Development Block Grants for 33 projects was awarded across the Commonwealth.

The funding will support projects that rehabilitate housing, revitalize downtown districts, and improve water and sewer infrastructure benefiting more than 10,000 low- and moderate-income Virginians.

“The foundation of every thriving community includes affordable homes, robust infrastructure, and an economy that works for everyone,” said Gov. Glenn Youngkin. “The Community Development Block Grant continues to be an invaluable resource for addressing community-identified needs by filling in crucial funding gaps to build stronger communities across the Commonwealth.”

The federally funded Community Development Block Grant program has been administered by the Virginia Department of Housing and Community Development since 1982 and annually receives approximately $19 million to distribute to small cities, counties, and towns.

With these funds, localities can provide new or improved water and sewer systems in rural areas, rehabilitate housing in declining neighborhoods, revitalize commercial districts, and provide facilities for a variety of needed services, such as health care clinics in underserved areas.

“While each of the 33 awarded projects supports vastly different community goals, they all foster strong local partnerships, diverse regional economies, and a higher quality of life for Virginians,” said Secretary of Commerce and Trade Caren Merrick. “Community Development Block Grant funding offers the flexibility needed to address the unique concerns of diverse communities, while building a stronger, more cohesive Commonwealth.”

The forgotten candidate: A.T. Brickhouse

African-American farmer from Hare Valley one of the few Eastern Shore residents to run for statewide office

BY TED SHOCKLEY

Eastern Shore Post

It is a rarity for an Eastern Shore resident to appear on a statewide ballot, and the two most memorable examples are widely chronicled.

Former state governors Ralph Northam, who served from 2018 to 2022, and Henry A. Wise, who served from 1856-1860, were both born in Accomack County and were elected as Democrats.

And 104 years ago, an African-American man from Northampton County appeared on the statewide ballot as a Republican for the position of state Commissioner of Agriculture, then an elected position.

It was one of the state's more unusual elections, and the candidate, Arthur Thomas Brickhouse, of Hare Valley near Exmore, was far from a household name — even if he was from a well-to-do family.

After the election, he faded into rural obscurity. When he died in 1970, his historic campaign wasn't even well-known in his home community. His body was interred in the family plot in Hare Valley, steps away from where the retired farmer lived.

The grave is marked by a military headstone, owing to Brickhouse's service in the U.S. Army during World War I.

But he is remembered as a well-read agriculturalist who apparently developed connections with some of the state's most powerful African-American leaders.

"He could talk about any subject," said Cape Charles resident Juanita Godwin, who was Brickhouse's niece.

However, it seems few talked to him about his remarkable role in the 1921 statewide election, in which African-Americans formed their own Republican ticket.

Frustrated at being ignored by a state Republican Party they had supported, hundreds of African-American ican delegates met on Sept. 5, 1921, and nominated their own candidates for eight statewide offices, according to The Valentine museum in Richmond.

If state Republican leaders felt a "lily white" image was needed to win, the African-American delegates chose "what came to be called the Lily Black Republican Ticket," according to the museum's website.

John Mitchell Jr., the editor of a Black newspaper called the Richmond Planet, was the nominee for governor.

J.T. Newsome, an African-American lawyer from Newport News, was the nominee for attorney general.

Maggie L. Walker, of Richmond, the first African-American woman in the United States to charter a bank and serve as its president, was nominee for state school superintendent. Today a Richmond school bears her name.

And for agriculture commissioner, the nominee was Brickhouse, about whom comparatively little is known.

Their campaigns were a decided longshot — "they knew they had no chance of winning," The Valentine museum reported.

Their candidacies weren't helped by the journalism of the day. Virginia's White-owned newspapers carried nothing of their platforms or biographies in the months leading up to the election.

But the Planet, Mitchell's newspaper, carried a front-page listing of the candidates — although Brickhouse's middle initial was incorrect — and a lengthy explanation.

“We respectfully and unreservedly demand to be treated as other citizens with all the rights, privileges and immunities accorded them, including the rights to vote and be voted for,” the platform stated, in part.

How the local farmer ended up on the ticket is a matter of conjecture.

His father, William H. Brickhouse, was a prominent man in the community. He was one of the officers in the Brickhouse Banking Company, which was issued a certificate of incorporation in 1910 to operate in Hare Valley. An article in the Peninsula Enterprise newspaper listed it as the only African-American bank of the time in the area.

Godwin said Brickhouse was a large landowner who also operated a store and donated land for Hare Valley School. Godwin said he was known for his horses, which pulled “the finest carriage around,” she said.

Arthur Brickhouse, one of his sons, was born in 1891 — some documents suggest 1896 — and worked as a clerk for his father when he moved to Washington, D.C.

There he registered for the draft in 1917 and was married in the city a year later.

After his military service, Brickhouse was back in Northampton County — and suddenly a candidate for office.

Virginia was strongly Democratic in 1921, and while none of the “Lily Black” Republican candidates won elections, none of the statewide White Republicans did, either.

But Brickhouse earned votes far and wide — 91 votes in Alexandria, 84 votes in Staunton, and two votes in Gordonsville.

He earned 78 votes in Accomack County, according to the Peninsula Enterprise, which didn’t carry Northampton’s results. But statewide he finished third in a three-candidate race.

Despite the loss, Brickhouse remained active, at least for a time, in statewide politics.

The following year he was one of the featured speakers after a parade organized by the “colored Republicans of the Virginia Peninsula” that proceeded from Newport News to Hampton, according to the Daily Press newspaper.

But then it was back to farming and quieter life. The 1930 Census had him boarding in Virginia Beach and working as a farmer.

In the 1940 Census, he was back in Northampton County, his employment listed as a farmer. He was head of a household that included his mother and sister.

When he died in 1970, Brickhouse was listed as a widower and a retired farmer on his death certificate.

It was a fairly quiet end for an Eastern Shoreman whose run for statewide office faded into the years.

Those who still remember Brickhouse say he had the personality of a politician.

“He would joke and laugh and talk. We really enjoyed him,” said Godwin.

Chanting, “Hey, hey, ho, ho, President Musk has got to go,” protesters walk up Mason Avenue in Cape Charles on Monday, Feb. 17. The afternoon protest attracted about 75 people, according to town police. “We’re not here to divide our community, we’re here to say, ‘We’ve got your back,’” said Lenore Debellis, far right, carrying an American flag. At left, Michael Rabdau carries a large painting by his wife, Kate Rooney.
